There's nothing alarming about the maximum ceiling price set by the OPA for a new alarm clock. Consumers should not be required to pay more than $1.65 for the war model.

A $50 war bond will be given the girl chosen "Victory Queen" of the 1943 "Happy Days" celebration, Hillsboro, July 3, 4 and 5, at Shute park. Select your candidates now.

Everyone is invited to sponsor one or more candidates for queen. The only requirements necessary to enter the contest is the sale of 35 tickets at 50 cents each for the dance at Shute park auditorium, Hillsboro, on Saturday night, June 26, at which time the queen will be selected. Returns from the ticket sale are to help defray expenses for the bond, outfit the queen and her attendants, as well as many other things necessary to make this part of the "Happy Days" celebration a success. The sale of tickets may be done by the contestant or her sponsors, or both. There will be a special prize of $5 to the girl selling the most tickets over and above the required 35 tickets.

It is especially requested that the name of the person chosen to escort the candidate at the queen's ball be given on the questionnaire.

United States Industries Are Growing Fast

Babson Park, Mass., June 4.—My readers should remember, particularly when making investments, that some industries are always declining whereas other industries are showing healthy growth trends. During the war we have been in a kind of new industrial revolution. Our engineers and scientists have developed certain existing principles and made important new discoveries. After the war we all can benefit in our every-day lives from the progress being made in science and industry.

Normal Growth vs. Stability.

Investors and industrialists who wish to play more-or-less safe have a rather wide choice for their investment capital between the newer stocks and the old-timers. Among the industries which are now in a normal growth period are office equipment, electrical equipment, radio, electrical utilities, petroleum, building supplies and automobiles. Most of these industries are now concentrating upon war work, but after the war they will resume their customary operations. They may be expected, over a period of years, to grow slowly in their useful services and supplies.

Industries which have more-or-less already "arrived" are characterized by their stability of operation. Among them may be railroading, mining, farm implements, telephone and telegraph, leather, lumber, ice, soap, cosmetics, containers, food, paper, steel and iron, the textiles and anthracite coal. Merchandizing, banking and the printing and publishing industry may also be considered in the stable group. All these groups will be part of the American business scene for many years to come. But sooner or later they may proceed to the point where radical new developments will force them to change their methods or products or else they will enter a period of declining usefulness.

Mid-Trend Industries.

There is also a midway group which will perhaps reflect, over the long pull, new growth and expansion. These include lighting and heating fixtures, bituminous coal, farming, suburban transportation, food preservation, photography, pulp products and home appliances. We all know that the lighting of factories and office buildings has improved immeasurably in the last few years. Further strides will be made in this field until perhaps the ordinary electric light fixture, as we know it, will be a veritable antique.

Bituminous coal is already giving us many new types of products of a plastic nature. It is still, when easily accessible, a most efficient source of electric power. Farming through chemurgy has an incredible future both from an industrial and food point of view. If space permitted I could go on and outline further new developments that will be made in the glass industry and in other lines.

Rapid-Growth Industries.

Industries in another classification are literally in the cradle. They may become to our grandchildren what the telephone, the automobile and the airplane have been to us. They in-

OPA Rations Canned Milk

The office of price administration Tuesday night added evaporated and condensed milk to their meat rationing program, effective at 12:01 June 2.

Under the new order, the purchase of canned milk will require one red coupon per pound. A consumer may buy two six-ounce cans for a single point, but each tin of milk weighing more than eight ounces will require one stamp regardless of the number bought.

Tuesday's action was designed to conserve dwindling supplies for infant feeding or for persons requiring tinned milk in special diets.

An OPA spokesman pointed out that this year's milk pack is expected to fall 25 per cent below the 70,000,000 cases produced last year. Furthermore, the government will buy about one-half of the total output for military requirements and for lend-lease shipment.

Funds Apportioned For County Fairs

The state department has apportioned $49,788 to continue to help finance 1943 county fairs. Washington county received $1431 and Multnomah $16,983.

Counties that do not use the money, may save it for future years, to use it for any fair or exhibition in the county.

Have you looked over the ads this week? If not do so.
