If Hitler had been a business man he would not have started this war. Business men figure profit and loss. They are realists. They don't want to make history. They don't waste any time getting even with anybody. They just want to make some honest money.

Normandy Site Of Many Wars

Battleground for Foreign
Armies Invading Europe
For Nine Centuries.

LONDON.—Because of its geography, Normandy has been the battleground for armies invading the continent for more than nine centuries. Before that the area was under constant threat of attack by raiding parties of Vikings and Scandinavian marauders.

Bayeux and Caen, Norman towns, the scene of the first fierce fighting between Allied and German forces, also have been trampled by foreign armies many times in past centuries.

Bayeux is the home of the world famous Bayeux tapestry, a venerable relic now light brown with age, on which the conquest of England by the Norman William the Conqueror is pictured. The town, 18 miles west of Caen and five miles from the English channel, was built by the Romans.

Fell to English Armies. In 890 the area was invaded by Scandinavians. Later Bayeux fell many times to English armies during the 100 Years war and the religious wars of the 16th century.

Bayeux is filled with many quaint timbered houses and stone mansions.

The Bayeux tapestry is a band of linen, 231 feet long and 20 inches wide. Its scenes of the Norman conquest of 1066 are in eight colors.

On the tapestry is the first recorded evidence of the famed Halley's comet which appeared at that time and was regarded as an omen of evil.

Caen, 7 1/2 miles from the English channel and 149 miles northwest of Paris, where Allied tanks were reported to have repulsed a large scale counterattack by German armor, was once the home of William the Conqueror. The castle of Caen, founded by William, still is employed as a troop barracks.

St. Pierre, Caen's famous Gothic cathedral, also was founded by the Conqueror in 1070. Until his bones were dispersed he was buried there. La Trinite, another cathedral in Caen, was founded by Matilda. Caen was first conquered by the English in 1417.

In Caen, William organized the main division of his troops that crossed the channel to conquer England.

Tapestries to Paris. It was not expected that Allied troops would find a famous work of art in Bayeux, according to Erich MacLagan, director of the Victoria and Albert Museum of London and an authority on Bayeux tapestry. Three years ago the Germans were reported to have taken all Bayeux exhibits to Paris for display for propaganda reasons. In 1804 Napoleon, who then was contemplating the invasion of Britain, took Bayeux tapestries to Paris for similar purposes.

BONDS OVER AMERICA

Austin in 1839

When the Lone Star flag flew over the first capitol building of the Republic of Texas, ox-carts brought into the building supplies through stockade gates.

Today our fighting men are trading the first sight of a jeep for the first glimpse of an ox-cart in many parts of the world.
