Keep It Flying

May the New Year bring peace to a war ridden world, is our most fervent wish.

Don't whisper it—but Beaverton is now listed in California, according to a news story by Rutgers News Service. If this news is authentic—California is a very cold country and stories about its climate must be still "unusual".

The life of a public official must become desirable to the young men of ability, if we are to secure the flesh and brains essential for the animation of the skeletons which we are so carefully creating in the conference rooms.

Attention has been focused on driving Hitler's totalitarian and brutal government out of France that sight has been generally lost of the character of government that France had before the war and the character that it may have from now on.

Consumers will want and expect more variation and greater ranges of qualities, colors, sizes and prices than have been available in the past. There are probably few if any American citizens who are not tired of regimentation of product as well as of methods of distribution.

We would not enjoy the sun if there were no clouds.

WHY JOHN RAY AND HIS CREW will not be home for Christmas

John Ray is a foreman for Portland General Electric Co. Why he will not be home for Christmas is a story as real as today, as moving as anything could be. Because, you see, it was not his fault he will not be home.

It was the fault of a ship and the circumstances surrounding it. It all goes back to a day last November when a ship, maneuvering into position, snagged its anchor on the submarine cables coming from the St. John Substation, damaging them beyond repair. Obviously it would take weeks for replacement. The arteries which fed many vitally important war plants were severed, forcing the suspension of operations.

But PGE's "know-how," skill and manpower... backed by years of experience, found a way to start, once again, the humming wheels and machinery of the war plants—and all in a matter of not weeks or even days... but in a matter of a very few hours. By morning, man-made lightning was again flowing to the plants which are building for victory and peace, over a new circuit made possible by utilizing a newly-completed transmission line and substation. This new line was built to connect PGE's Station E in North Portland with the Bonneville Power Administration main transmission line.

Linemen, engineers... your neighbors and mine... had worked throughout the night making the emergency connections. But this was not to be the end—not for John Ray's crew of linemen. Because these vital plants must work 24 hours a day to keep up with the tempo of victory, they close but two days each year, Christmas and the Fourth of July.

On Christmas, then, this crew... the same boys who, with others, often go out into a snowy, freezing, wind-swept night to make repairs, while you are comfortable in your home... will work until the inadequate emergency repairs are replaced with permanent, lasting materials. At the very moment when weather is at its worst, PGE's faithful linemen are out in the storm making sure that you will have the power for heat and food and light. And they are proud they can help in this way... proud they can help their neighbors.

No... John Ray and his crew will not be home for Christmas. They will be working... to speed peace... when we can ALL be home for Christmas... together.
