The Low Down From Hickory Grove

I just been reading about this Beveridge person in England—the duck who is preaching security and comfort of Govt. expense and without worry or perspiration. Everybody must be happy. And if the gent should put over his deal, he himself, would be in the top spot—and need to perspire least.

In his scheme the Govt. would own the means of production—the stores—factories. The citizens would be employes only. The Govt. would fix wages. Every citizen could then stop thinking—and sit down with nothing to stew about—and wait for the undertaker. And that is supposed to make people happy.

And here in our land of the free we should not guffaw too loud—we do funny stunts, too.
But this Mr. Beveridge—he would even say on which corner there would be a grocery store. And grocery stores being my weakness, I speak up. These serve-yourself outfits in our U. S. A., the ones where you have the run of the range and are free to roam and sniff—they are up my alley. Anybody ever starting talk about a Beveridge style store in my neighborhood is gonna lose some of his tail feathers.

Yours with the low down,
JO SERRA
