Fish Kept Norway Alive for 5 Years

Still the Mainstay of Average Norwegian Family.

OSLO, NORWAY.—Sigvald Lindemann's family rarely ate fish before the war. Today, the four Lindemanns eat little else. If they hadn't learned to like fish they probably would have starved long before the Germans left Oslo.

Fish kept Norway alive through the five years of German occupation and it's still the mainstay of the average Norwegian family. But Allied merchantmen are unloading at the Oslo docks now, and the Lindemanns can hope for an occasional piece of meat to supplement their fish dinners.

The Lindemanns in Oslo are a typical Norwegian middle class family.

They pay the equivalent of $30 a month for a centrally heated apartment equipped with electric stove and refrigerator. Mrs. Lindemann, slender, blond and fortyish, boasts that Oslo's housing is the most modern in Europe.

Mrs. Lindemann constantly apologizes for the threadbare condition of her furniture, which she hasn't been able to repair or replace for five years. And the Germans took away their radio and the family car long ago.

Mr. Lindemann might be called a typical Norwegian white collar worker. He earns $160 a month as assistant manager of a paper and stationery store.

Twelve year old Johan may have a small glass of skimmed milk. Only babies get whole milk. Then at eight o'clock, the family has a small supper of bread, margarine, cold fish and perhaps a slice of Danish cheese.

The Lindemanns will keep on getting along on their fish diet, plus some small imports of meat, for another year, but they're not complaining.

Duke Stands by as King's English Takes a Beating

MELBOURNE, AUSTRALIA.—Ninji, king of 20,000 natives of the Mount Hager region of New Guinea, greeted the duke of Gloucester and then in an address reminded his own barefoot natives and constables that the duke was:

"Brother true belong king, one fella poppa, one fella momma." He told them he had come to "look it you fella New Guinea and speak true belong you," to which the duke replied he was "happy to much belong you fella."

Ninji wore a headdress of cassowary plumes set on tambu shells, draped behind with wood and metal from fallen aircraft. A flat shell was attached to his nose and rested on his black beard, and another enormous shell dangled from his neck. The duke wore a slouch hat.

'Mighty I' Will Make Japs Pay

Destroyer, Victim of Direct Suicide Hit, Is Ready to Add to Heavy Toll.

SAN FRANCISCO.—A great rent gapes in her hull, 15 of her enlisted men are dead and 30 wounded, but the destroyer USS Ingraham will split the seas again with her trim nose for another crack at the Japanese.

The 2,200-ton "tin can," now in dry-dock for repairs at Munter's Point, San Francisco, survived a direct hit by a Japanese suicide plane early in May north of Okinawa, and came home under her own power, the 12th naval district announced, according to the Associated Press.

Before receiving this nearly mortal wound the Ingraham had taken a heavy toll. She was instrumental in sinking three enemy vessels, and destroyed six of the seven suicide planes which chose her as their target in the flaming fury of a dawn attack by 70 to 80 Japanese aircraft of all types.

Nicknamed the "Mighty I" by her crew, the Ingraham was operating on the edge of the East China sea with another battle famed destroyer, the Morrison, when she was hit.

Moved in for Kill.
Enemy scout planes sighted the two craft during the night. As daylight came the big suicide squadron moved in for the kill, diving from all directions at the destroyers and their smaller support craft.

Lt. John D. Brink, USNR, San Diego, Calif., Ingraham gunnery officer, said the Japanese threw all available planes from modern fighters to old twin-engine float craft into the battle.

The Morrison was struck and badly damaged. The Mighty I steamed to her aid firing "at everything in sight." Then seven Jap suicide pilots peeled off toward the Ingraham. The ship's gunners knocked down six of them in two furious, action packed minutes.

The seventh bored through the barrage of steel from all available ack-ack guns and crashed into the vessel's side at the water line, ramming into the crew's mess hall with its bomb exploding in the generator room.

Flames swept through the stricken ship, and she settled in the water until her decks were within five feet of being awash. Overhead other Japanese fliers poised to deal the death blow, but American combat air patrolmen sent them plunging into the sea by the score and none reached the Ingraham.

Helps Protect Carriers.
Forty minutes later rescue tugs took the crippled destroyer in tow and pulled her to safety.

The Ingraham, one of the Barton class of big destroyers, participated in the Leyte island, Philippines, and other Southwest Pacific engagements before reaching the high mark of her 14-month career while escorting American carriers in strikes at the Tokyo-Yokohama area.

In late February she was off Iwo island pounding enemy shore installations with her 5-inch guns. A short time later she joined the destroyer pack in protecting United States carriers softening up Okinawa for invasion.

Idle British Workmen Shout 'We Want Work'
LONDON.—Eight thousand employees of the Napier engineering factories in suburban Ayrton marched into Hyde Park shouting: "We want work!"

About 2,000 of the workers had been declared "redundant"—no longer needed on war work—and the remainder declared a strike in sympathy. Demonstrators carried banners bearing the slogans: "We produced for war; we can produce for peace" and "Unemployment appeared in 1918, has this war been in vain?"

The Low Down From Hickory Grove

Now that the war is over we can begin to ask questions and maybe ferret out some answers and decide if we choose to do as we are told like we are used to doing or if we can use our own head. I got in mind this 30-hour week business.

I been putting 2 and 2 together. They been telling us how they are closing down the OWI and AAA, etc. But when one outfit folds up, the Boys and Girls just show up in another dept. in the next office, next day. But if the worst comes to worst this 30-hour idea will fix it so nobody in the Govt. will be out. And when election times comes along, millions of employees—and their relatives—will have votes which is not bay, as votes go.

All Govts. get top-heavy, when the citizens go docile—as you read in history—and go kinda balmy before they blew up. France took on the 30-hour week, and socialism, and petered out. At one time Spain was a world power—so was Portugal—so were the Romans a hefty outfit. They all figured they were some pumpkins—and then folded. Yours with the low down

Something to Think About
