THE NEW LOS ANGELES STATLER, hoped for completion by 1948, is to have 1400 rooms and cost $18,000,000. Executives of Hotel Statler Company, Inc. saluted the future of the West in announcing their plans to build this beautiful structure.

The "Statler" Comes West

In revealing plans for the first Statler in the West, John L. Hennessy, chairman of the board, and Arthur F. Douglas, president, praised the West and its future.

"We are going to build the finest hotel in the United States," declared Mr. Hennessy. "It will incorporate features of the Washington, D. C., Statler, and will have everything for comfort and convenience."

The Los Angeles Statler is to be air-conditioned with all outside rooms, equipped with radio and television. The main ballroom is to seat 1300, and an exclusive supper room is included in the plans.

Guests arriving by car may register and go directly to their rooms without entering the lobby. The hotel will be the ninth owned or operated by the Statler organization.

Skyline Stages Seeking Charter For New Bus Line

On May 24 and 25, and on June 17, 18 and 19, a Public Utilities Commission hearing was held in the Court House at Hillsboro, Ore. to hear the case of the Skyline Stages, who want to secure a charter for an additional bus line.

This new line would extend present routes to make a complete inter-urban bus line from Portland to Hillsboro. It would take passengers from point to point and cover districts off the highway which now have no bus service.

The proposed route would start in Hillsboro, travel East on Main Street, out the Baseline to Tobias, east to Stacey, south on Stacey to the highway, east to Wheeler Ave., south on Wheeler to Chapman's Corner, east on the Farmington Road to Beaverton, and then up the Canyon Road to Portland.

This line would have two loadings in Portland. At S. W. 5th and Main. This would make it much easier for us to catch a bus than it is now when we have to go to the Central Bus Depot in Portland.

If the charter is granted, the Skyline stages would run 20 round trips a day, which would be an adequate service. This would help our community, since good transportation is so necessary to our growth.

If the Skyline Stages secure their charter they have agreed to put the potential profits back into equipment until they have a well equipped modern line.

The Oregon Motor Stages are fighting the proposal saying they cannot afford to run buses to Forest Grove and Tillamook if they do not get the local traffic between Portland and Hillsboro.

As the case stands now it has been submitted to the commission and his decision is being awaited. An early decision is not expected.

Diabetes

When we read about people who lived in the Middle Ages and come across a description of the meals which were served then, sometimes we are shocked at the quantity of food that the well-to-do consumed. Perhaps we should remember, however, that people were more active in those days than they are today.

Some of the diseases which people have today may be traced, in part, to their failure to adjust their eating habits to the lives they lead. One of the reasons that diabetes has become more common in recent years may be that people are eating too much rich food while living rather sedentary lives. This, of course, is not the only explanation for the greater prevalence of diabetes but it is undoubtedly one of the factors involved.

Diabetes is due to an overabundance of sugar in the blood. The body requires sugar for heat and energy and it obtains this sugar from carbohydrates—such foods as sweets, bread, cereals, potatoes, macaroni and spaghetti.

If more sugar is consumed than the body can use, the rest is stored away or turns to fat. Conversion of sugar into heat and energy is made possible by a secretion in the blood stream called insulin, which is manufactured by cells in the pancreas. If anything interferes with the flow of insulin, the body is unable to use the sugar consumed from carbohydrates and diabetes results.

Early symptoms of diabetes are constant thirst and hunger, even though a normal amount of food is eaten, loss of weight for no apparent reason and spells of weakness and dizziness.

If these symptoms are present, the individual should consult a doctor immediately. He will make a urinalysis and test the blood for sugar content. The earlier diabetes is discovered, the easier it is to control it. The diabetic patient should be on a special diet as recommended by a doctor. Indiscriminate cutting down on carbohydrates is not sufficient to control the disease. The patient should be under medical care. Often the diabetic must take injections of insulin, made from the pancreas of certain animals, to supply the deficiency in his own blood. Insulin neither cures nor prevents diabetes. It is an aid in controlling the disease and should be used only as the doctor advises.
