Farm Crops Committee Recommends Rotation Of Soil Building Crops

Planting suggestions and recommendations for the 1948 crop season were developed by the Washington county farm crops committee and the extension service at a meeting last Thursday, reports Palmer S. Torvend, county agent. The major emphasis of the committee and the county agent was to the effect that farmers should grow those crops which would help them to maintain a balanced rotation between cereals and legumes, especially emphasizing the importance of maintaining a good acreage of soil building crops on every farm. Hairy vetch is a good possibility, now that DDT dust will give satisfactory control of weevil, and is recommended particularly on hill lands where soil is not particularly fertile. Demand for hairy vetch has been very good and the government continues the 12 cent support price for next year.

Austrian peas were recommended as an excellent soil building crop in addition. Livestock and dairymen who have harvesting equipment to handle peas would well afford to grow a certain acreage each year because of the value of the screenings for feed. Government loan value on Austrian peas for next year is 4 cents. Ten pounds of white Holland wheat and 15 or 20 pounds of oats with peas make desirable feed for livestock. Sixty pounds of peas per acre is the rate generally used.

The acreage of Willamette and common vetch grown in the county should be maintained. Certified Willamette seed is recommended. The 1947 crop has been pretty well cleared up at a fair price so that there does not appear to be much carry-over.

Plantings after the 20th of October have out-yielded earlier plantings practically without exception. Aphid migration to new plantings after the 20th of October is not nearly as likely to occur as before that date.

No increase in either common or English ryegrass was recommended. Reports indicate a fairly large carry-over. With fertilizer programs adopted by many growers, the yield of seed per acre has practically doubled the last four or five years.

Farmers who have chowings and red creeping fescue fields for seed production that have become fairly weedy might well consider plowing them up now because of the lowered price, and demand for clean seed. Those who have ground that is reasonably clean, and can profitably grow these grasses at the lower prices may wish to make new plantings in rows. Western Oregon farmers in order to compete with seed grown east of the mountains must produce clean seed and the best opportunity to do this appears to be by row planting and roguing the fields. Thirty-six to 42 inch rows are recommended.

Farmers planting wheat who have been experiencing trouble with Hessian fly should wait until October 15 before planting as that date appears to be the dividing line when fall infection of Hessian fly will occur. Some spring infection may develop on poor fall stands. Owners who have fields that are not coming along too well may make an application of 80 to 100 pounds of 20% nitrogen per acre to stimulate the growth. It is not desirable to apply nitrogen to fields where lodging may occur. With the government export program continuing, it appears that there will be another year of fairly good demand for wheat. Demand for Hannchen barley is expected to be good although prices may not be as high as those experienced this past season. Farmers growing grain crops can well afford to make use of spray applications of 2.4-D, according to results by farmers using it this past season, to control annual weeds, Canadian thistle and morning glory. Increase in crop yield alone will generally more than pay for the cost of spraying. Spraying is generally pre-

LIKES TRANSPLANTING

Mrs. Roy Leach, of Milwaukie Wisconsin, is one of the recently transplanted-to-Oregon residents of the community who really likes the climate and the people here. At present "camping out" as she phrases it, in the Alexandria apartments, across from the Skyway cafe on Canyon Road, she declares she would very much like the opportunity to meet more of the nice people already encountered in this Oregon corner.

With Mrs. Leach is her husband and two sons, Donald and Lawrence.
