A PUBLIC SERVANT

Many are the loads that must be carried by the tried and proved public servant, Advertising. In every means of communication current to our modern age. Advertising has brought to the reading public services beyond compute.

In times of national or community stress its role attains great erosion-control dams, and similar significance. Yet the week by week and month into month job this approved practices under the agservice handles reflects across the nation the effect it leaves on al- ricultural conservation program most everything it touches.

Under normal times the hand-maiden of competition, advertising has aided wide-spread distribution of material things which are accepted as identical to the "American Standards." Merchandising, happens than to trry to take steps whether it's soups or soaps, fuels or jewels, autos or mottoes, would after the soil is gone. lose valuable service without the backing of Advertising.

Blood relative to the concept of a Free Press, Advertising is open to all who are able to pay the necessary charges. Likewise, unless known to be a fraudulent piece of goods, a newspaper is dutybound to sell its space to an advertiser, if it conforms at all to the practices of a Free Press.

A high-powered advertising firm of New York, through a representative, foresees a swelling volume of "public relations" advertising which it prophesies will equal or exceed all the space being sold in newspapers today.

Public relations advertising, for the readers information, is the type of advertisements a nationally powerful organization issued in urging the demise of OPA. It painted an enticing picture of more goods at lower prices, by the cancelling out of this government bureau which was becoming recognized by the public, generally, as a veritable gadfly.

In this example, the doors to newspapers' advertising colums swung open as if by a magic word. Acceptance of the remunerative ads, of course, was vigorously defensible. Only a minority of publications in the country editorially challenged the anti-OPA thesis and without doubt there are many who then acquiesced to the suggestion of abandoning price controls through the persuasive influence of such advertisement.

By the prophecy of a New York advertising firm, the future will bring even more of this type of advertising-which is using a proved servant in behalf of selfish propaganda. Such prediction, of course, leaves any newspaper and its policy-

Advertising particularly of a local nature, is the life-blood of an American Press. It serves a reading public by publicizing prices and products available. Yet, if any advertisement is taken, all should be taken-unless there can be detected an odor of fraud.

The only salvation for a newspapers' conscience-where such exists-is by remembering its bi-lateral nature, of part editorial and part advertising. No advertiser, by the purchase of significant space, should also be granted a proportional interest in editorial integrity.

The reader, likewise, should exercise judgment in all advertisements, particularly of the "public relations" variety and look to the editorial counterpart of the newspaper for some sign of acquiescence or protest. The confidence any newspaper enjoys in its field of readers mistakes of human judgment on part of its policy-framers, a news- have shucked off their lethargy and their doubts, many will accept paper might rightly be assessed by the degree of its editorial in-

And, also indicative, is whether or not Advertising is a public servant ... or the editorial master.

Soil Building Pays

The old adage about not mis ing the water until the well runs dry is too true when it comes to conserving our soil, according to Albert E. Krahmer, chairman of the Washington County Agricultural Conservation Committee. Too often it takes devastating floods, gully-torn fields, or dust bowl to bring to our attention the need for conserving our soil And too often that is too late. Studies made in Iowa showed that around 105 tons of soil per acre were washed away on unprotected slopes plowed up to produce crops. On open tilled corn land, the loss averaged 67 tons. On the basis of soil analyses, one cubic foot of good black soil contains about 31/4 pounds of phosphorus and 11/2 pounds of potash. At prewar fertilizer prices, the loss of 67 tons of soil would amount to $59.15.

All over the country there are farms which have been destroyed or nearly destroyed by the ravages of erosion. But we shouldn't wait until all our land is in this condition before we do something about it, Krahmer said. Tiling. construction sod waterways, seeding of good grasses and legumes, will help prevent these disastrous soil losses.

And it's much more economical to check the erosion before it
