May Festival At Cedar Mill Last Fri. Draws Many

French, chairman of the board of directors were last in line. Pages were David Peterson and Dick Wilkins. At the feet of the queen and her court there followed a program in keeping with the occasion. A polka by the third and fourth grades, songs by the upper grades, Loobie Loo by the first and second grades, a Highland fling by Katherine O'Connor and Joyce Farmer, songs by the third and fourth grades, "I See You" by flower girls and their escorts, a ballet dance by Diane Milan, songs by the primary grades, Virginia reel by princesses and escorts and a Maypole dance by the upper grade girls constituted the program.

Accompanying her were Mrs. Nina Moore and Verne Libell. On display were handcraft projects of the cubs. A general introduction to the cubbing program was made followed by stunts by the various dens. Den 3 displayed bird houses with each boy giving a few habits of his bird. A Virginia reel was danced by Den 1 followed by a bull fight enacted by Den 2 and a skit depicting Oregon legends by Den 4. During the business meeting a report on presentation of the telephone petition to the public utilities commission was made by Marvin Lain. More complete information was promised for the June meeting. Refreshments and a social hour were held in the cafeteria.

Some GI's Failed Because Glamor Distorted Focus

While the majority of GI students who quit school list financial difficulties and illness as their stated reasons, a big factor is their failure to take advantage of advice offered by the veterans administration, which would direct them to fields of study related to their abilities. This was the general opinion voiced by educators from 29 state and independent colleges of Western Oregon who met in Portland recently to discuss current problems faced by veterans in school. Of GI's who quit school, many are those who had attached a "halo of glamor" to a particular field of study, only to have this halo "evaporate" after they had entered school and found the subject dull, too difficult or not to their liking, in the words of one college representative. The edu-tors agreed veterans should be urged to take VA advisement. Vernon I. Basler, regional VA chief of vocational rehabilitation and education, declared that so long as present laws remain in effect, advisement will continue to be available to veterans.

Chairman Carl F. Freilinger of the Multnomah county veterans' group called on schools and employers jointly to "give careful consideration" toward planning for the employment of veterans upon graduation. Greatest impact on labor market will be felt in 1950, he said, when 10,000 Oregon veterans now in their sophomore year will graduate.

The chairman also said his committee will go before the VA to seek a current ruling which school officials said is working an injustice on veterans. This ruling denies a veteran the right to re-enter a course of study in a new school after flunking the same course in a previous school. Educators said this is denying him another chance to make good.

Understanding the control which Love held over all, Daniel felt safe in the lion's den, and Paul proved the viper to be harmless.
