

Beaverton Girl Takes Sophomore Year In Stride

Miss Barbara Heywood spent the recent weekend with her mother, Mrs. Peter Nicolai, Spencer, ave., Beaverton and has returned to Eugene to enroll for special courses in journalism at the summer session of the university.

Miss Heywood has completed her sophomore year at the university most successfully. At the annual Emerald (university newspaper) banquet she received the appointment of associate editor for the coming year.

During the month of May she was tapped by three distinct national honorary fraternities for her service throughout the year in journalism, the study of the German language, and women's service in general.

On May 24 at the ASUO (associated students of the university of Oregon) elections, she won an unprecedented election to the board of trustees of the University Co-operative store. Unprecedented, because she filed "for the heck of it."

In the campaign, which was a bitter one, she permitted no party endorsement, no speechmaking in her behalf—in short, as an Emerald editorial stated: "She filed to see how far a person could go in politics without the usual trappings" she won."

Miss Heywood has also held the office of recording-secretary of the Newman club throughout the past year.

Young Lady Age 1 Notes Birthday With Big Party

A birthday party was given by Mrs. Dean L. Puckett for her daughter Donna Mae on her first birthday June 8. Those present were grandmother, Hazel B. The living room was decorated with crepe paper streamers and pretty balloons. A birthday cake with one large candle was served with ice cream and refreshments.

Donna Mae received many nice birthday gifts and cards.

Council Extends Azalea House Project 5 Years

Funds in excess of $15,000 have been raised by county home extension units for the Azalea House building fund, a project adopted by the state home economics extension council to provide a house of residence for girls at Oregon State college, with preference given, if necessary, to those who are in home economics and who were former 4-H club members.

Decision to defer actual construction until more money is raised was made at the annual meeting of the state council at OSC recently. The project was extended into a five-year project so that the major portion of money needed may be raised before construction begins.

Amortization costs are to be avoided as much as possible so that living costs to girls may be kept as low as possible, reported Mrs. Norman Lunde, Portland, state chairman.

Baptist Services Cites Centennial Sunday, June 20th

The Ground-Breaking services for the Canyon Road Baptist church, to be held Sunday, June 20, at 3:30 p. m., will be a recognition of the one hundredth anniversary of the organization of the Willamette Baptist association which took place in the old West Union church in this area, 100 years ago this month. Dr. Ralph C. Walker, of the White Temple in Portland, will speak briefly on this phase of the service.

The meeting, Sunday afternoon, will be on the building site about three-fourths of a mile east of Beaverton where McLain Drive and Lake road enter Canyon road. The donor of this lot, Mrs. Emma Nilson, is to turn the first shovel full of earth, and will be followed by Oscar Kruger and Eugene Crosby, representing the board of trustees and deacons, respectively.

Others who will take part in the brief ceremonies are Dr. F. W. Starring, executive secretary of the Oregon Baptist state convention; George Walker, president of the Portland Baptist City Mission Society; Rev. Geo. Hardy, president of the Portland Baptist Ministerial association; Rev. Everett C. Bowers, president of the Beaverton Ministerial association; John Arnett, the builder; Walter E. Kelly, the architect, and Dr. A. E. Roy, Baptist layman.

There will be special musical numbers by the church. A motion picture camera is to be present, and as many as desire may have the opportunity to turn a shovel full of dirt as part of this historic occasion. Neighbors and friends throughout the valley are invited to be present.

Regular services will be conducted by the pastor, Rev. Russell B. Thomas, in the Odd Fellows hall, 53 N. Broadway, Beaverton, at 11 a. m., with Sunday school at 9:45.

Couty 4-H Club Members Appear On Station KOAC

The schedule of broadcasts over radio station KOAC featuring local boys and girls attending 4-H club summer school on the Oregon State college campus has been announced by L. J. Allen, state club leader.

Washington county 4-H club members are scheduled to be heard Thursday evening, June 17 between 7:30 and 8 o'clock daylight saving time.

As in past years, a radio revue has been scheduled. This program will feature entertainment provided by the best musicians and others among the 1800 boys and girls attending summer school. This program will be heard Wednesday evening, June 23, starting at 8:00 o'clock.

Staff members in charge of the 33rd annual 4-H club summer school will summarize the event on the final broadcast scheduled for the summer school on Friday evening, June 25. As in other regular broadcasts, it too starts at 7:30 in the evening.

Pamphlet Warns Stay Out Of Old Abandoned Mines

A pamphlet designed to show the dangers, particularly to children of school age, of exploring old mines or other underground openings is being distributed free by the state department of geology and mineral industries.

The presentation is illustrated by John Powers of the safety department of the Anaconda Copper Mining company. The text was supplied through the co-operation of the safety division of the U. S. Bureau of Mines and the Arizona Small Mine Operators association.

It illustrates graphically many hazards which are peculiar to old underground openings, and warns against their exploration by persons inexperienced in underground work.

Weather Ruling Factor, Harvest Of Strawberries

Whether or not strawberry harvest for the county will approximate normal will be decided almost wholly by the ruling factor of weather, declares J. V. Chandler, Tigard fruit and berry processor, who put his newly-built processing sheds in operation June 12. Extremely hot weather or rain will cut off the crop, either by spoiling the size of the berry or by outright ruination.

From the Washington county extension agent's office, it is learned that the crop, at present status, is just about average. One of the great fears is that excessive rains will affect the harvest as it did last year, with berries rotting on the vine. Prospects, however, are for about two weeks more picking, at least.

The berries, this year, are of high quality, large and good, in all parts of the county from where crop reports have been received. Prices vary from 18 to 21 cents per pound.

Demand for pickers is strong as harvest gets under way. Wages paid to pickers is 4½ cents for all season picking. Headquarters for employment are being maintained by the state at the farm-labor camps east of Hillsboro city limits. Facilities for migratory workers are also maintained at the camp.

Most of the processors in the county, so far, seem to be freezing the berries, because of the high quality crop and ready marketability of the frozen product.

Chandler, employing about 40 women and 12 men in his beginning operation, puts his strawberries up in 50 gallon barrels or 30 pound tins, has them frozen in Tigard or Portland and ships them east or south to market. He expects to enlarge his working force to 60 women and 14 men, as he swings into full seasonal production.

Columbia Flood Brings Problem State Game Men

Among other victims of the rampaging Columbia river is the state game department which finds itself face to face with a major problem of game and fish rescue and salvage.

Between five and six hundred young pheasants were lost at the new state game farm, Hermiston, Oregon, when high water swelled an irrigation ditch which overflowed its banks in a flash flood and picked off the pheasant chicks, some two weeks old, that were staked out in a twenty acre field.

More serious is the job facing the commission when flood waters recede from thousands of acres of land along the Columbia that are now flooded over. It is believed that as the waters go down the land will dry reasonably fast and many thousands of fish will be lost unless their salvage can be speedily carried out.

Many men, declares C. A. Lockwood, state game commissioner, will have to be brought in from the field to assist in the salvage operation. A large crew will be needed, he points out, because of the large area of land which must be covered with little time to lose.

OSC Will Climb Out Of Mud, 1948 Football Season

Oregon State's football team will play its home games on a brand new field next fall. Work has started on the complete rebuilding of Bell field. The present turf already has been removed and excavation down to eight inches nearly completed.

The general pattern that was followed in the successful reurfing of Portland's Multnomah field last summer will be followed.

Under the system the field will be divided into 15-foot, V-shaped drainage sections. At the bottom of each section will be tile running crosswise on the field and connecting with tile running lengthwise at the side of the grid iron. There will be catch basins on the sides to drain out surface water.

When completed, the field will be 16 or 17 inches higher than the present level. At maximum depth of each drainage section there will be 11 inches of coarse gravel, 3¼ inches of finer gravel, ¾ inches of sand, 5 inches of sandy loam and 2 inches of select top soil.

Seeding of grass is expected to take place early in July and the field will be ready for the Beavers' home opener against Idaho on September 18. Multnomah field was ready to play on six weeks after the grass was planted and held up very well under heavy rains last fall.

Bell field was first turfed in 1938 but adequate drainage was never attained and the field became a sea of mud after heavy rains. A partial retiling job on the original turf last summer failed to solve the problem with the result the college athletic board decided to completely rebuild the field.

Traffic Safety Boosted By H. S. Driver Training

Approximately 1800 Oregon high school students completed courses in driver education and training during the school year just ended, Secretary of State Earl T. Newbry has announced. It was the first year the state's driver training program functioned on a wide scale.

Forty Oregon high schools offered the courses, one semester in length and including behind-the-wheel training to supplement classroom instruction. Portland schools trained 413 of the estimated 1800 students throughout the state who completed the work.

Newbry said the problem of securing trained teachers and of integrating the courses into already crowded school schedules was hampering further expansion of the program.

"Thorough training of each new crop of drivers is essential to the long-range plan for accident reduction," Newbry said. "These problems can and must be overcome."

Oregon's third course for driver training instructors has been scheduled for next August in Portland, under the sponsorship of the Oregon State System of Higher Education and the American Automobile association. In addition, Oregon State college is offering a teacher's course as part of the regular summer session in Corvallis.

Automobile dealers are supplying free dual-control cars to schools with approved instructors.

Movie Stardom Awaits 4-H Girl In Picture Role

Some 4-H club girl is destined for movie stardom, according to Joe Cox, Washington county assistant county agent, who reports a nationwide search being carried on by a Hollywood producer for an important role in a forthcoming picture.

June 24 is the deadline for entries and the producer is looking for a girl under the age of 13 to portray a leading role in the picture "Green Promise," which deals with a farm family's struggle for success.

To be eligible for the talent search, the girl must be within the age racket and be enrolled in a regular 4-H club project. A photograph or snapshot must accompany each entry.

Entry blanks may be obtained from the county extension office at Hillsboro or, in some cases, from 4-H leaders elsewhere. Deadline date must also be strictly observed to qualify for the bid to movie fame.
