Keen Competition Marks Livestock Show, State Fair

Keenest competition in its history will mark the livestock exhibits at the Oregon state fair, in SSalem, September 6 to 12, declares Manager Leo Spitzbart, in pointing out that a record number of Washington, British Columbia and Idaho show animals will be on hand to contest with Oregon exhibitors for afir honors. Spitzbart, who is always a booster for good farming practices, further relates that, after two years of planned control, the state fairground's 167 acres are now entirely free from rats and moles. The little nuisance animals, he relates, will not badger exhibitors in 1948. Thirteen counties have reserved space for individual displays which will emphasize agricultural or industrial production which is part of county "sales talk." These displays will be housed in a new building, within the fair's main agricultural building. Counties so far represented include Curry, Hood River, Lane, Coos, Benton, Marion, Clackamas, Linn, Malheur, Yamhill, Tillamook and Morrow. A traditional part of every fair, trotters, pacers and sulkies, will be again offered on the fair's afternoon racing program. Each day's schedule will number two harness races and eight running events. Closing dates in the Oregon bred Debutante Stakes and the Governor's Handicap have been extended until August 15. Deadline for culinary, textiles, art and floral entries is not until September 4. Premium lists for the four divisions may be obtained from the state fair association, in Salem.
