War Brides Need At Least 2 Years For Citizenship

Two years of residence with their husbands in the United States is the prime requirement for naturalization of alien war brides, the Oregon Department of Veterans' Affairs was informed this week.

Checking with the Bureau of Immigration and Naturalization, the state veterans' agency learned that war brides who entered this country under Public Law 271 of the 79th Congress, which authorizes the entry on a non-quota basis of women who married American servicemen overseas, have a two-year waiting period before they may apply to become citizens.

They must, however, be married and living with their husbands during this time. Divorce, or separation because of death or for other reasons, will cause another year's extension of the waiting period, the immigration bureau said. Citizenship is not compulsory, it was pointed out.

The so-called war bride act expires this December 31, as does the alien fiancée act. Wives or fiancées of servicemen or veterans actually must be on United States soil to meet the deadline.

The two-year waiting period for citizenship for fiancées starts after the date of marriage and the presentation of necessary documents to the immigration bureau to establish legal entry.

At the end of the waiting period the applicant for citizenship reports to the naturalization bureau, where her legal entry will be verified, and tests given regarding her knowledge of the English language and of American history and civics. The war bride then is sent to court for a final naturalization hearing.

Those concerned are advised to see their local county clerks for application blanks and necessary instructions.

More Homest'ds Offer Priority to Recent War Vets

Priority will go to World War II veterans on 46 homestead farm units covering 3,618 acres of irrigable land to be opened soon on the Gooding division of the Minidoka project near Twin Falls, Idaho, the Oregon Department of Veterans' Affairs said today.

Applications must be filed by December 30 with the Project Land Use Specialist, Bureau of Reclamation, Route 3, Jerome, Idaho to be included in the drawing. Interested veterans are urged to write the Jerome agency immediately for application blanks, to assure proper study of the instructions before filing.

Although the land being offered "will have to be cleared and prepared for irrigation," the bureau's announcement describes it as "very productive," offering such staple crops as alfalfa, wheat, barley, oats, beans, peas, potatoes and sugar beets. In addition 'cattle raising and dairying are important industries, and hogs and poultry do well."

Applicants must have $3000 in capital or assets, two years of farm experience, five references and must intend to farm as an occupation.

Each successful applicant will be given two barrack-type frame buildings and war surplus items including small tools, toilet fixtures, tables, chairs and army blankets.

Assistance in laying out fields and irrigation systems, clearing and leveling land, developing domestic water systems, crop and livestock production and farm building construction will be offered by local, state and federal farm agencies.

Personal inquiries regarding the land opening may be made at the Project Land Use and Settlement office, Bureau of Reclamation, Hunt, Idaho.

PRAYER MEET
 Prayer meeting will be held this Thursday evening in the home of Mr. and Mrs. Orville Chappell in Farmington.
