Don't waste hot water

HELP SAVE ELECTRICITY

4:30 to 6:30 p. m.

Plan to bathe and launder in the morning hours. By doing so you can keep your electric water heater from using extra power during the peak use hours between 4:30 and 6:30 p.m., workdays. If possible, wash the dishes from your evening meal after 6:30 p.m. It will also help if you check to make certain your hot water taps are turned off tightly. By saving hot water, by acquiring the morning habit for bathing and laundering you will help to keep jobs going and prosperity growing in the Northwest.

WHY CONSERVATION IS NECESSARY

Winter brings greater use of lights and equipment using electricity. It brings a pick-up in industrial production which means still more power use. All this reaches a maximum between 4:30 and 6:30 p.m. when thousands of housewives start preparing dinner and thousands of men and children start using water (most of it heated electrically) to clean-up. The result is that the total power available from all present Northwest power sources can barely cope with the demand. A serious breakdown can occur unless you help during the peak use hours.
