Ore. Voc. School Graduates First Class June 24th

The first graduation exercises, building dedication ceremonies and reduced tuition fees mark some of the events slated soon for Oregon Technical institute — the state's two-year-old vocational school at Klamath Falls.

State Vocational Director Oscar I. Paulson informed the Department of Veterans' Affairs that 223 students—208 of them World War II veterans—will receive diplomas Friday, June 24, in the initial graduation ceremony honoring those who have completed training in some 32 courses ranging from body and fender repair to medical technology and accounting.

Regarding tuition fees, Paulson said these will drop in some courses. Fees henceforth will be charged on a term basis when the school switches to a schedule of fall, winter and spring terms from its current month-by-month enrollment plan, Paulson said. This change takes place starting August 1 when the new year begins.

Each term covers a little more than three months. There will be mid-term registration periods, Paulson said, to permit students to enroll who are unable to enter during term openings. Director of the vocational school is Winston D. Purvine.

Oregon Pack Of Canned Peas To Nudge Last Yr.'s

The Oregon-Washington pack of canned peas for 1949 is likely to be almost as high as last year's according to preliminary crop estimates forecast by the agronomy division of the American Can Company.

The estimated output will rank the Oregon-Washington area in the nation's highest output bracket, second only to Wisconsin.

If good crop conditions continue farmers of the two states will produce 5,400,000 cases this year, as compared with 5,669,540 in 1948.

The total U. S. production of peas for the year is currently calculated at 27,850,000 cases—an increase of roughly 4,500,000 cases over last year.

SHORT STORY

Susan's Suspicion

By EMMIE BELL PORTER

SUSAN shut the French door and held her hand over her eyes. She had distinctly heard her best friend, Phoebe, say: "Roy dear, we really should confess to Susan . . . even if she is your wife, you must realize that she is no child!" Roy's darkly handsome face was bent over the chair where Phoebe reclined gracefully, one arm thrown carelessly over the cloud of dark hair which framed her delicate, heart-shaped face. Her blue eyes were fixed on Roy's troubled brow and one slim white hand rested fleetingly on his brown one.

She knew by the uncomfortable look on both faces as she entered that the conversation had not been finished. The clock chimed, breaking the silence. "Gosh!" exclaimed Roy. "I really must dash!" Excusing himself he hurried up the stairs. Susan tried to make her voice casual. "Too bad Roy has to go away so quickly on this business trip. He does hate to travel anyway . . . and having to leave on such short notice has really upset him."

AFTER bidding her good-by, Susan hurriedly joined her husband in the bedroom. Roy's usually calm face was flushed. Hastily he crammed pajamas into an open bag, as he anxiously asked, "Susan, are you sure you will be all right, staying here alone?" "Of course," answered Susan, flinging herself into a chair. Roy's dark eyes were suddenly shadowed with pain. "Dear," he murmured, laying his arm lightly around her shoulders, "Dear, I want you to always remember . . . no matter what happens . . . I've always tried to be a good husband to you."

"Why Roy," laughed Susan as she blinked back sudden tears. "Darling! You sound as if you were going away forever, instead of just several days." She laid her hand caressingly on the broad dependable shoulders. "We have had a pretty swell life together in the two years we've been married haven't we?" Roy tipped her head back and passed his hand over her features. "Yes, dear a most wonderful two years!" He pressed his mouth briefly against her cool lips and was gone . . . down the steps into the waiting car.

SUSAN slept fitfully and at eight o'clock was debating with herself whether it was worth the trouble to go down and make coffee, when suddenly and terrifyingly the doorbell rang. Susan fled down the steps with terror tugging at her heart and threw the door open to a weary looking Phoebe who stood on the steps smiling through her tears. "Phoebe," gasped Susan. "Phoebe, what—Why—is anything wrong?"

"No darling," soothed Phoebe. "Everything is very much all right . . . very much so!" she repeated mysteriously. "I have something for you." She held out a folded piece of paper to Susan. "Here, take this. I'm spending the day with you . . . read the letter, then come on up and I'll answer all your questions then."

As one in a dream Susan sat down weakly and read: Dearest Dearest Susan:

When you get this letter the operation will be over and everything will be perfectly all right. I found out only today that I would have to have an emergency operation and conspired with Phoebe to keep it a secret from you . . . knowing how much you love me and worry about me at the slightest excuse, I wanted to spare you the suspense and the worry. This was one decision I had to make alone . . . as I was only given a fifty-fifty chance to pull through . . . and I felt it was unfair to ask you to help make a decision of that kind. Phoebe has her instructions to give you this letter when and if the operation is a complete success. Remember, I love you,

Roy's darkly handsome face was bent over the chair where Phoebe reclined gracefully.

Mr. Jones is not here right now. May I take a message?"
