SHORT STORY

Ma Lost The Key

By SHIRLEY RAY

"DEAR MA and Pa, Jeff and I have gone to the city to be married. Ma, you just will never see things our way so this is all there's left for us to do. I'm sorry," (signed) Jennie."

From behind the barn Hiram could see the ancient auto rattling toward home. Elvira's gaunt figure at the steering wheel was silhouetted against the white road, and Hiram smiled to himself at the picture of his very large wife in the very small car. As it pulled into the driveway he quickly ducked out of sight. Better to have her discover the note herself. Reluctantly he went into the house himself.

She wheeled upon him sharply, her whole figure trembling with rage and astonishment.

"Hiram! Have you seen this?" she demanded.

"Do you realize what this means? Jennie—she's gone! Jennie's gone, Hiram!" She waved the note wildly in his face.

SHE stormed at the little man furiously. "They have no right to marry! He'll never be able to support her; his own father said he'd never make a farmer. All this talk about his wanting to study engineering and such nonsense—I won't have my daughter be his wife!"

"Now, listen, Elvira," he said boldly, "you're just carrying on so because Jennie's outwitted you! This would never have happened if you hadn't been so stubborn and would have consented to their marrying in the first place. If there's anything you women can't stand it's to have another woman out-do you—even if she is your own daughter!"

She read the note over again. "Jennie says they're leaving for the city. That must mean the 11:15 train. It's just eleven now; if we hurry we can catch her." Under her breath she added to herself, "So she thinks she can outwit me!" and drawing her lips into a hard, thin line, she grimly barged out the door. Hiram followed.

She opened the squeaky garage doors with an effort, and they went inside. He puffed away on his pipe as she fumbled in her huge handbag.

"Hiram, have you the car key?"

"No, Elvira, I ain't seen it all day."

She dashed out the door and he followed with a flashlight. They searched the driveway. They overturned flagstones and ran their fingers over short blades of grass. But there was no key. They went into the house and turned everything upside down. But no key.

"HIRAM," she exclaimed suddenly, "you sat in that rocking chair when you came in. What did you do with my things?"

"Why, I set them on the table there."

"Yes you did!" she accused. "You set everything there but the car key. Don't try to lie to me now. Hiram! I know very well you'd like to see her get away, but I won't have it! Hiram, if you got that key..."

"Elvira, I swear to goodness, I ain't seen it."

"The train leaves in two minutes," she wailed as she glanced at the clock. Her spirit was entirely broken. Her great frame even seemed to sag.

Hiram patted her benevolently. "Well, you go to bed now, Elvira, and have a good cry. Crying always does do women folk good. I'll be along in a while."

He walked onto the porch. The air was sweet with the smell of hay. Far in the distance he heard the melancholy whistle of a train, then all was quiet again. He puffed contentedly for a while on his corn-cob, then took it from his mouth and knocked the bowl against the railing. There was a bright flash and a small clink of metal as the ashes fluttered to the ground. Hiram smiled slyly to himself, pocketed the battered old pipe and started in.

Wash. Co. Health Ass'n. Plans TB Meeting In Fall

Mrs. Sadie Orr Dunbar spoke before members of the Washington County Tuberculosis and Health Association at their meeting, Thursday evening, June 9, in the home of Mrs. Zola F. Morgan, Executive Secretary of the Association. Mrs. Dunbar stressed the responsibilities of the Association, its members and officers and their relation to the State and National Associations.

She also talked on the Work Shop that is to be held at La Grande, Oregon, August 15th to 18th. Several from the County Association are planning to attend. A general round table discussion with questions and answers followed.

Mrs. Zola Morgan gave a comprehensive and interesting report on her attendance at the National Tuberculosis Association Convention in Detroit, Mich. May 2nd to 6th. She said there were some two thousand delegates, divided into three groups—the Medical Section, the Health Education Section and the American Trudeau Society. Dr. G. C. Beltinger, Supt. of Oregon T. B. Hospitals, was elected to the office of President at the National meeting. Seven delegates from Oregon attended the Health Education division of the meeting and were to report on it at the Annual State Convention in Portland May 26th.

Mrs. Morgan then gave her report on the State Meeting and her Executive Secretary's report for April and May.

Newly re-elected President C. J. Fink spoke of plans for a strictly Tuberculosis meeting to be held in the Fall. The tentative date is Sept. 22nd. This is to be a general County "Pep" meeting.

Motion was made and carried that no Board meetings be called in July and August. Seventeen members and guests, including Mrs. Dunbar and Mr. L. P. Putnam of the State Office were present.

After the meeting was adjourned refreshments were served by Mrs. Morgan, assisted by Mrs. C. J. Fink and Mrs. Clyde Yount.

NEW JOINT SCHOOL DISTRICT HOLDS ANNUAL BUDGET MEET

TUALATIN VIEW—The annual spring school budget meeting was held at the Barnes school house on June 20. This was the first meeting held after the consolidation of the Barnes-Tualatin View school, now Barnes School District No. 57, Joint.

The budget was voted in for $38,500.00 over the 6% limitation for the operation for the school year 1949-1950.

One director was elected, Ross Whisman, succeeding himself for a three year term. Mr. Whisman has served 10 years as director and chairman of the board. Mr. Henry Johnson, who has served for 32 years on Barnes School board resigned on account of his health by order of his physician. His resignation took effect on the 20th.

Another meeting will be called in the near future to fill the unexpired term of one year. Plans are shaping up for a new 11 room grade school for the district and bonds are to be voted on soon.

WESTHAVEN ROAD
The County Road Department has started work on the road in the Westhaven district widening and grading of Westhaven drive is underway.

ZIMMERMAN-HAWKINS

Ila Zimmerman and Edward Hawkins were married June 25, Centenary - Wilbur Methodist Church of Portland was the scene of the informal wedding performed before the immediate family and friends, Saturday evening, June 25. The Rev. Edward Terry officiated.

The bride is the daughter of Mrs. Evelyn James and was given in marriage by Mr. Riley B. Osborn and attended by Mrs. Riley B. Osborn. She chose for her wedding a pink gabardine suit with brown accessories and wore a purple orchid corsage.

Mr. Hawkins, who is the son of William Hawkins was attended by Lyle Hoag as best man.

After the wedding a reception was held in their new home at 11510 S. E. Boise St. They left on a short wedding trip to Seaside and coast resorts.

Depraved Tastes Show Feed Lack In Cattle Grass

Lack of phosphorus in the ration feed of cattle will encourage depraved appetite in cattle as well as reduce the calf crop and stunt offspring, according to a county farm agent's dispatch.

First grave symptom of this improper feed shows in bone-chewing or wood chomping with the animal finally becoming stiff at the joints, meaciated and listless. There is no set time of the year for this deficiency to appear.

Most common incidence of this nutritional imbalance, it is believed, shows up during the winter and spring periods of dry feeding. Principal grasses from high rainfall areas and short grass plains are short in phosphorus, a deficiency that shows up from the seed stage on.

The most satisfactory method by which bone-chewing might be eliminated is directly supplementing minerals to the livestock diet. Such an addition might be non-calcium phosphate, which contains 18% phosphorus and 15% calcium.

It may be fed in troughs, straight or mixed with a chaser of salt—at a ratio of one pound of phosphate to 2 pounds of salt.

Bonemeal is also often used. It contains slightly less phosphorus and twice as much calcium. The high calcium is considered of little value as most range grasses contain adequate amounts of it at all times. Phosphorus is the most serious deficiency.

It is alleged that once the practice of feeding phosphorus in supplement to grasses results leave little doubt as to its benefits. These include larger calf crops, heavier calves and better spring condition of the stock.

Scenic Jackpot Hit on Motorlog To Washington's Mt. Rainier Area

This is a condensation of a motorlog article appearing in The Sunday Oregonian June 26. It is one of a series sponsored by The Oregonian and the Oregon State Motor association.

BY JALMAR JOHNSON
Senior Editor, The Oregonian

Like most residents of the western slope of the Cascades, this writer and his family are quite familiar with the western Mt. Rainier country, but had never visited the eastern approaches to the mountain and Rainier national park until a recent week end when we headed the Oregon State Motor association's white Ford in that direction.

We hit the scenic jackpot—the majestic Columbia gorge, the sagebrush of central Washington, the green orchards of the Yakima valley, rushing mountain streams, virgin pine timber on the eastern slope of the Cascades, the verdant green of the moist west slope.

Two Days Sufficient
We found that a Portland motorist with scarcely more than 500 miles of driving can see all this and visit both sides of Mt. Rainier national park in as little as two days—or as many more as he cares to devote to the trip. He can stay in comfortable hotels and mountain lodges and eat in modern restaurants, or he can camp out in the open in forest and national park camp grounds.

Our assignment was to log a loop trip from Portland up the Evergreen highway to Maryhill, then north on 97 through Yakima and northwest by highway 410 over 5440-foot-high Chinook pass, then west by Washington state highway No. 5 through the southeast corner of Mt. Rainier national park to the junction of the Pacific highway at Marys Corner, the well-known western turning-off point for Mt. Rainier.

Two days before we left Yakima to explore the upper reaches of the Cascades and determine what the loop was like, Chinook pass had been opened. A record winter fall of snow had been sliced through by snow plows, as with a knife, leaving huge banks of snow on either side of the highway. Much of this snow will remain well into the summer, it seemed certain.

We passed the summit, crowded with skiers, amateur camera enthusiasts and just plain sight-seers, and reached the junction where highway 410 continues on to Seattle and state highway 5 heads west for Marys Corner. There a sign, "Road Closed," blocked the entrance to highway 5. We had to retrace our route through Yakima and back to the Evergreen highway. We had made the trip a few days too early, but a check-up on our return revealed that by the time this article is in print the road will be open and the east and west entrances to Mt. Rainier park as well.

Western Oregonians and Washingtonians are prone to think of the areas east of the mountains as desolate stretches of sagebrush except where irrigation has caused orchards and green fields to sprout or dry farming has developed grain fields. There are such stretches and from the valleys the hills seem bare compared with the country west of the Cascades, but our trip up the east slope of the high range was a revelation to us.

The mountains were covered with green timber—high, large dimension, virgin stuff, unspoiled by cutting. Naches river, running swift and high from the snow banks above, was as pretty a stream as we had ever seen west of the mountains. Fishermen dotted its banks, trying their luck with rod and fly. Cool, grassy camp grounds along the river looked inviting.

Fishermen try their luck in Naches river north of Yakima.

Map shows loop trip that takes in both sides of Rainier park.
