ATTRACTIVE "EL PASO" DUO Starring in the spectacular Western drama "El Paso", which occupies top billing Friday and Saturday, at the Canyon Drive-In are John Payne and Gail Russell, shown above.

The film tells the story of a Charleston lawyer (Payne) who comes to El Paso at the end of the Civil War on business. . . and to renew a flickering romance with Miss Russell, cast as the daughter of a drunkard-judge who has become a tool of the town's Noodnik and his henchman, the Sheriff, who has likewise gone astray.

It is a thrilling yarn pointing up some of the beginnings of the Texas town and giving the believable moral, at the climax and fadeout, that law and order must prevail.

A "MUST" for fans of the Western story.

GREETINGS YOU ALL
A column might not be self-supporting. But it should be self-explanatory.

With this issue, we are hoping to build up a section of the publication to give expression and direction to the amusement side of the grim old life. As a public service, this page should, in time, give readers sound advice as to where they might conveniently entertain themselves without going beyond the area encompassed by the Tualatin Valley.
