Three of Aloha Tell Re-opening For Donut Shop

Three local people, Mr. and Mrs. E. W. Ober and Mrs. Drake all of Aloha, plan to open a completely remodeled Donut Shop in Aloha, Saturday, July 9.

The public is invited to drop in and have coffee and donuts between the hours of 2:00 p.m. and 6:00 p.m. on opening day.

Besides handling the regular line of doughnuts and coffee they intend to fill orders for church groups, clubs and other social gatherings.

Social Security Merry-Go-Round Gives Big Load

With social security benefit rolls approaching the three million mark in the United States, the Portland office of the Social Security Administration is handling a greatly increased workload, according to its manager, John F. Richardson.

Claims applications filed during the first five months of 1949 jumped to 3600 for the period, an increase of nearly 35 per cent over receipts during the same period in 1948. This may be due to less opportunity for older people to secure jobs.

During the first five months of the year 165 residents of Washington county filed claims with the Portland office of the Social Security Administration according to Richardson.

The Old-Age and Survivors Insurance part of the Social Security Act provides payments to retired workers, their wives, and unmarried children under 18 years and to their survivors in case of death.

Animal Housing Slum Clearance Boosts Hygiene

Aggravated slum conditions not only bedevil humans. Some farmyard facilities are an undisguised disgrace and a challenge to sanitary science and hygiene.

Picture-book buildings that shelter champion milk producers, precocious steers, and 300-egg hens are labeled as "palaces in the slums" by the nation's leading veterinary medical publication.

"True, herds and flocks have been gradually provided with protection against climatic vicissitudes as civilization has advanced and as populations have multiplied, but to say that hygienic housing has kept pace with sanitary science is far from the truth," the Journal of the American Veterinary Medical Association declares.

A small number of architectural masterpieces built for highly valuable livestock have conveyed a false impression of the over-all animal housing situation, according to this publication.

America has literally shut its eyes on the "uncounted thousands of bank barns and adjacent dung piles" that many farm animals know as their home, the article continues.

Even though it would be a vast and difficult job, the housing of livestock ought to be solved by legal enactments as faithfully conceived as the sanitary codes for human dwellings and meat-packing plants, the Journal says.

"Moreover, labor-saving arrangements in animal buildings would overcome, in part, the flight of the rural population to industrial centers."

In snakes and gecko lizards, the tear duct opens into the mouth.

Pedestrians At Crosswalk Have Right Says Law

The principle that when a pedestrian starts across an intersection on the green light he is entitled to complete his crossing and has the right of way even though the light turns red before he gets across was upheld in an opinion in the federal court of Pennsylvania recently, according to the Oregon State Motor Association.

Courts uniformly have held that the person on foot is entitled to the right of way under such conditions and the recent ruling emphasizes the fact that motorists should observe this principle, according to the Association.

In its ruling, the court said: A pedestrian at an intersection has a superior right of way over vehicles when, after he has started across, the traffic light turns against him."

The fact that the courts uphold the pedestrian's right at intersection is one more reason why pedestrians should accept their share of the responsibility for safety in traffic by crossing only at intersections, never in mid-block, according to Dr. E. B. McDaniel, president of the motor club.

"Oregon in 1948 was awarded top honors in pedestrian protection in the national contest sponsored by the AAA." Dr. McDaniel said. "One of the reasons for Oregon's success in this contest is the equal sharing of responsibility for safety between motorists and pedestrians. If we keep up the good work, we'll win more awards and save more lives."

Britain's war with France in 1695 was partly paid for by a tax on bachelors.
