Nursery Rushes Fir Seedlings To Beat Early Snow

OLYMPIA, WASHINGTON — (SPECIAL).—Lifting and packing 700,000 Noble fir seedlings at the Forest Industries Tree Nursery at Nisqually is being rushed in an early-season effort to get the seedlings to the high mountain areas for hand planting before snow covers the ground.

This year's crop of 9,500,000 seedling trees is the largest in the eight-year history of the loggers' tree nursery, according to W. D. Hagenstein, forest engineer of the Forest Conservation Committee of Pacific Northwest Forest Industries.

The nursery has contract orders for 6,500,000 trees which will be planted on taxpaying forest lands in need of reforestation in western Washington and Oregon, Hagenstein said.

The forester pointed out that the 3,000,000 surplus trees will be sold to other companies and landowners, as has been the custom in past years, when a surplus was available.

When the rush of lifting the Noble fir seedlings is over in about two weeks, packing will be suspended until the middle of November when the main species will be lifted, packed and shipped through the end of March. Douglas fir comprises better than ninety percent of the crop, with other species being Poplar, Orford cedar, Monterey pine, Sequoia, Norway and white spruce.

If the nursery is successful in selling its surplus, this year's crop of seedlings will restore to productivity 17,250 acres of idle forest land. This giant forest planting project will cost private forest owners about $350,000, Hagenstein said, and will give more than 17,250 man days of employment.

WHO OWNS A DEAD DOG?

The owner of a medium sized white dog with long hair and a brown spot on its face, which was killed Saturday by a hit and run driver on Bertha-Beaverton highway at Ruby St., is asked to report to the sheriff at Hillsboro, according to Mrs. Philip Mead.

The car which killed the dog was a black Willys sedan, '38 model, of which the license number was obtained.

The sheriff, however, declares he is unable to prosecute the hit-and-run driver unless the owner of the dog appears to swear out the complaint.
