SPORTSMEN ASSIST IN ANGLING REGULATIONS

Sportsmen are making numerous recommendations regarding the 1950 angling regulations, stated Mr. Charles A. Lockwood, Oregon State Game Director. Lockwood reminded anglers that the public hearing concerning angling regulations will be held in the Portland office of the Oregon State Game Commission at 10:00 a. m., January 13.

The public is invited, and representatives of organizations and individuals will all be heard. For accuracy in the record, though, Lockwood requested that all important facts and statements be submitted in writing.

Tentative regulations for the coming year will be announced after the public hearing. The Commission will reconvene after a two week interval, make any changes deemed necessary, and set the final angling regulations for the year 1950.

HUNTING AND FISHING AROUND

With this presentation, Fred Goetz and Kay Parsons begin co-authorship of a weekly column of outdoors information.

Readers are invited to send in accounts of their fishing or hunting experiences and to ask questions on wildlife matters.

This is intended as a steady feature.

The Steelhead are definitely on the run. Some amazing catches have been reported in Oregon's Nehalem and good fishing in the Tillamook and Wilson. Washington streams have been producing also. The Lewis, Washougal and Toutle are running true to form according to early reports.

H. L. Webster, of Gladstone, recently took his share of Steelies from the Tillamook. Clarence LaFond, of Beaverton reports landing a few of the sea-going rainbows in the Wilson. Information on the Washington streams come from our game warden friends who tell of fair catches in the Washougal and Toutle. Yours truly happy to report hooking a few in the Lewis.

It's surprising the amount of anglers switching to light gear for steelhead fishing. The boys admit they lose a few in fast water but claim they hook more and have a helluva lot more fun. Sounds logical, doesn't it?
 The full impact of the failure of Washington and Oregon's Game Commission to agree on a reciprocal license arrangement was brought to bear when we purchased our Washington Anglers permit last week to the tune of 15 dollars. "You guys from Oregon asked for it and you got it," was the attitude expressed by the license agent when we remarked in a joking manner, "We only wanted a sportsman, not a commercial fishing license."

It seems logical that the Oregon and Washington fisherman may feel a little resentment towards somebody's game commission this year. Frankly we did but after checking into the situation we find good reasons for both states asking for a higher non-resident fee. The Oregon Commission denies responsibility for our own $15 out-of-state license, they merely asked for more revenue at the last meeting of the state legislature at Salem. Whether the high non-resident fee produces more or less revenue remains to be seen.

Can the Washington Commission be criticised for their "Tut'n about is fair play," measure? Don't think so. Not sufficiently armed with facts at this time to know whether this condition will be good or bad for all concerned (that includes the poor fish.)
 All we can say is, "Ouch nicked again."

The 2nd half of Oregon's Migratory Waterfowl season proved a lot more successful than the 1st half, a condition that has existed since the adoption of the split season. Better weather and more birds and yet we sorely missed the speedy and reckless little Teal this year.

Appeared to be a lot more Mallards buzzing around this season and the quackers seemed to be in excellent condition. Many hunters thought there might have been better shooting if the Washington season had corresponded with ours. Sportsmen will remember that last year after the season ended there were a lot of dead and starving waterfowl around the Portland duck hunting area's due to the freezing weather and the lack of food and open water. Counted as many as 25 dead Teal in one small pot hole. Wonder if there is any connection between last years Teal casualties and this years scarcity? Could be!

 The cause of nationwide game fish conservation was given a shot-in-the-arm recently by the incorporation of "Sport Fishing Institute" an organization started by prominent fishing tackle manufacturers.

The group has outlined a six point program to improve sport fishing facilities and to assist and encourage co-operative effort between all conservation groups. Membership in the new organization is open to any individual, firm, corporation or association.

Detailed information can be obtained by writing to "Hunting and Fishing Around" or directly to: SPORTS FISHING INSTITUTE, BOND BUILDING, WASHINGTON 5, D. C.

This might be the anglers equivalent to "Ducks Unlimited."

Health Officer Visits County To Get Experience

Dr. Miles J. O. Gullingsrud, health officer of Baker-Union county, is spending the week at Hillsboro in the public health office there as a short course in orientation to a new field. He will observe the goings on, which included the Crippled Children's clinic under examining orthopedic physician Dr. L. J. Cohen, January 10.

Dr. Gullingsrud, having practiced privately near LaGrande before entering the public health service, will observe a week's routine in Washington county, according to Dr. Hollister M. Stolte, district health officer.

Communicable diseases reported at the county office show three cases of flu and two of dysentery. Although neighboring Yamhill county has had 9 recent cases of diphtheria, Washington county has escaped, so far.
