Now you Know!

The answers to everyday insurance problems*

By Leonard Adams

QUESTION: In a recent discussion of various types of insurance covering damage and theft of things like jewelry, furs and luggage, one of our friends with some insurance experience kept comparing "regular" fire and theft policies with what he called "floaters." Can you tell me what difference there is between these policies?

ANSWER: There is a basic difference in these two kinds of insurance. Under the "regular" policy, the insurance company states the various types of loss for which it will pay and it is not liable for losses not specifically mentioned in the policy. In the "floater" the company is liable in all losses not specifically excluded by the policy. Any good insurance agent can tell you which is best in your individual case.

* If you will address your own insurance questions to this office, we'll try to give you the correct answers and there will be no charge or obligation of any kind.
