

Wear Green For Emerald Isle To Honor St. Patrick

By Don Fibiger
 Sure and E is St. Patrick's Day. March 17 is the date set in honor of the saint from Ireland.
 Contrary to belief, Patrick was not Irish himself. He was the son of a Roman captain and was born on the "white isle" instead of the "emerald" one.
 When he was sixteen he was captured by an Irish raiding party, and went to Ireland as a slave.
 Three years later Patrick escaped and returned to England and then to Gaul to study to become a priest. He vowed he would come back to the land he had come to love and free it from the power of the druids.
 Seventeen years later Patrick returned as a bishop.
 He preached for forty years and converted the whole isle to christianity.
 Our "wearing o' the green" on the seventeenth of March signifies our tribute to a beautiful green island and its patron saint, St. Patrick.

Construction at C. E. Mason School Begins March 14

With award of contract on Mar. 10, actual construction of the addition to the C. E. Mason school began March 14, according to Errol Hassell, superintendent of school district 48, at Beaverton.
 Low bidder was Fred Juhr and Son of Portland, with a figure of $121,975. Other contractors and the amounts of their bids were:
 Ross B. Hammond, $128,471; R. M. Robson, $127,900; Howard Halvorson, $133,773; Charles Schmiedeskamp, $134,106; and Hansen and Emerick $144,253. All bidders were Portland firms.
 Bids were on the basis of building the entire outside structure, floor slab and roughed-in plumbing for nine classrooms, lavatories and a library, with five classrooms and lavatories completely finished. The contract bids also included a bus garage and shop.
 Additional classrooms and facilities at the school were made necessary by the increase in school-age population which is translated to terms of heavier enrollment at both Beaverton grade schools.
 School board members are hoping the work will be completed in time for use by fall.
 Bond bids for the construction project were opened March 7 but because the interest rates were so low the board's maturity schedule was thrown off. All bids were rejected, pending the readvertising with an amended maturity table.
 Rejected bids offered interest rates from two and one-eighth per cent to two and one-half per cent. New bid awards will be made April 4 at 8 p. m.
 Hassel estimates the low interest rates will mean a saving of as much as $20,000 in construction costs.

Co. Concert Ass'n. Boosts Numbers; Assures Season

Washington County Concert association has increased its membership for the third consecutive season, according to Mrs. V. W. Gardner of Hillsboro, president. Growing interest throughout the county made possible the selection of four outstanding concerters for the 1950-51 season, she said.
 The Graudans, cello-piano duo, will open the season in November. In Europe they achieved individual distinction as soloists, and as a duo they gained even greater popularity. For the past ten years, they have been playing to audiences all over the United States.
 Nino Martini, tenor, will appear in January. He first made his reputation through the radio and motion pictures. For over ten years he has been a leading star of the Metropolitan. Each year he has fulfilled long concert tours throughout the United States.
 Two concerts are scheduled for February. Richard Fattrell, young New Zealand pianist, first attracted attention as winner in the Australian Broadcasting Commission's concert contest. This year he does two American tours, one of his own and one with the London String Quartet.
 The Columbia Operatic Trio will bring the season to a close. Included in it are Helen George, soprano; William Upshaw, tenor; and Carlos Sherman, baritone. They will present solo arias, duets and trios from grand opera and light opera classics.
 According to Miss Amarette Barnes, who was in charge of the membership drive in the Beaverton area, there was a marked increase in interest in the east end of the county.

Political Pot Bubbles With Many Seekers

FIVE GOP VIE FOR CO. JUDGESHIP; FOUR FOR COMMISSIONER
 County politics zoomed to the boiling point, as far as the May primary election is concerned, with 5 Republican candidates for the post of county judge; 4 Republicans and 2 Democrats for county commissioner; one Democrat and one Republican for county coroner and a lone Republican apiece for the posts of county treasurer and county surveyor.
 Ray J. Vanderzanden, Banks, noses into the county judge race at deadline time, March 10, with a slogan vow that he "will conduct administration of office in sound, aggressive and energetic manner." He is a Republican.
 Earlier in the day, Lowell L. Ganger, of 6604 S. W. Newton Place, Portland, 19 (Raleigh district) filed for county judge on the Republican ticket. In his own business for thirty-five years, Ganger lists his slogan as, "A successful farmer-businessman who will conduct Washington county business successfully."
 Previously entered in the judgeship contest were Herman D. Kerkman, incumbent; Henry A. Kurattl, Hillsboro Justice of the peace, and Harry M. Seibold, mayor of Hillsboro, all of them Republicans.
 Kerkman's slogan differs, "Sound administration of county business."
 Kurattl promises, "With justice to all and fear or favor to none."
 Seibold offers, "A business administration—full cooperation for the benefit of all Washington County."
 The lone Democratic contest on the county ballot will be between Kenneth A. Smith, of Tigard, and Sid Jarrell, of Hillsboro, who are entered in the race for county commissioner.
 Smith joined the political lists on March 9, with a slogan-pledge, "Make a stand for progressive administration."
 Jarrell, who raises horses and does much travelling over the county, declares in his slogan, "Any person paid by the taxpayers is a servant to the public."
 The other lone Democratic candidate is Graham S. Young, of Tigard, who is disputing the job of county coroner with F. J. Sewell, Republican. Neither candidate faces a battle in the primary but will tangle in the fall general election.
 Young's slogan declares he will "Render efficient, understanding service with fairness to all."
 Also shoe-ins, with no candidates listed to oppose them are Republicans Maud W. Boscow, county treasurer, and H. P. Barrows, county surveyor, both seeking reelection.

Council Passes Daylight Saving Time Ordinance

Beaverton city council, at a meeting of March 13, officially declared daylight saving time to begin April 30, 2:01 a. m. and to conclude September 29, 1:59 a. m., Mayor H. H. Jeffries announces.
 Garbage collection rates for residents will increase from 75 cents minimum to $1, minimum, per month, through passage of another ordinance to amend the present one. Fay Evans, franchised garbage collector, made the request because the service requires more revenue than the old rate brought in. Business rates remain as before.
 Allocation of costs to taxpayers will begin as the result of a resolution adopted calling for improvement of S. E. Hall street, from Farmington road south to Watson.
 As the result of a recommendation from "Skip" Weigle, police officer, and the Beaverton Businessmen's Association, one hour parking on Broadway and Watson streets will be enforced, in accordance with the city ordinance. Signs set up during the recent war period allowed two hour parking but in the future, the council ruled, they will be disregarded and new parking time limits added.

Salem Sand and Gravel To Complete City Sewer Job

DISCUSSION CENTERS AROUND MOST DIRECT METHOD IN FULFILLING TERMS OF CONTRACT
 Chief discussion at the meeting, Jeffries points out, was the method to be employed for fulfillment of contract terms which specify a water-tight sewer line installation.
 Wilson, contending that the leakage is due to loose "Y" plugs and through manhole drains, indicates the company's intention to uncover "Y" connections and mortar them watertight.
 Green, who states he has made an extended survey of the lines, declares the leakage is general and not traceable only to loose "Y" plugs. He advises uncovering the entire line for a block or so, checking on joints as well as plugs.
 The problem of Beaverton, Green adds, is that when the surface water level goes down enough to permit correction of contract deficiencies, there may be a companion slackening of leakage which will make it difficult to accurately watertight the lines.
 Taylor, representing the company which holds performance bond of the contractor, consulted with the Salem Sand and Gravel company representatives during a recess, seeking advice on the company demands for immediate payment of $10,199.51 for the satisfactorily completed storm sewer installation.
 Although he did not report the results of his conference, Taylor announced he would send a letter to state the surety company's position after return to his San Francisco home office.
 Dave Lofgren, city attorney, offered the opinion that Beaverton cannot make payment on the sewer job until it is approved by the engineer.
 "While the storm sewer seems to be all right," Lofgren declared, "we feel this is a uni-contract and payment on the approved portion of the contract must be withheld until the entire job is completed."
 "We have no intention of trying to gyp the contractor. We want a good sewer and will pay for it. But it is not our desire to put out good money and then be told we had no business doing so."
 Lines vary in depth, according to the engineer, from 5 1/2 to 16 feet, with average depth of 7 or 8 feet. Surface water leaking into the sewer lines is important, he adds, because it too must go through the sewage treatment. Excessive infiltration plus sanitary flow would require a greater capital outlay than the city could support.

Demonstration In Cake Baking For 4H Club Leaders

Cake baking demonstrations for Washington county 4-H Club leaders and those who plan to be leaders during the summer will be featured at a training class Tuesday, March 21, in Portland Gas & Coke company's Forest Grove "Hospitality House" at 1930 Main street.
 The class will begin at 10:30 a. m. and will last until mid-afternoon. Mary Frances Kelly, County Extension Agent, said that the affair will be conducted very informally and she urged both active and prospective leaders from the entire county to come and bring a box lunch. Coffee will be served.
 Sponsored by the County Extension Service, under whose direction the Washington county 4-H Club program operates, the cake baking class will be conducted by Barbara Alford, gas company home economist and Oregon State College graduate.
 Miss Alford's demonstrations will cover practical methods of selecting ingredients, combining materials and modern methods of baking. She also will discuss standards of judging the finished product. Basic recipes for various types of cake, such as sponge and butter cakes, will receive special emphasis. Ice box cookies also will be demonstrated.

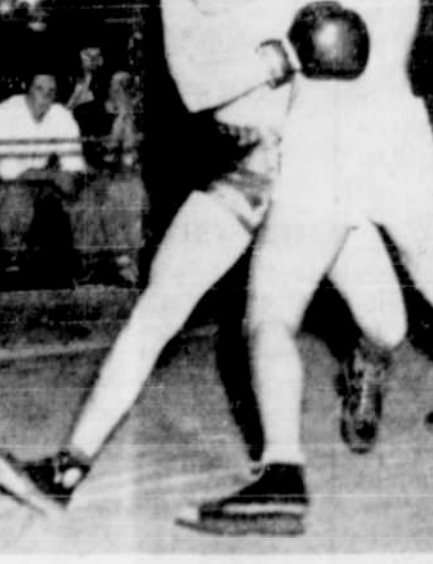

Gov't Furnishes Mail Truck For P. O. At Beaverton

The Beaverton post office will soon sport a parcel post delivery truck, furnished by the government, according to announcement by Donald L. Jenkins, postmaster, who tells of other improvements that are soon to be incorporated to bring patrons of the office greater service.
 An extremely beneficial addition to the lobby of the Beaverton post office, Jenkins adds, will be a stamp-vending machine, which will permit after hours purchase of stamps and on Sundays, holidays and Saturday afternoons. The machine will have three units, one each to sell five 1c, five 2c or 5 3c stamps.
 Five more street letter boxes will be located soon throughout the residential area and allow more points of mailing. At the present, there are 5 collection points.
 The truck, being furnished from Seattle, will be used for parcel post delivery, special delivery, collection and relaying. It is hoped it will speed present delivery methods by about four hours.
