STOLE MORE THAN THE BANK'S ENTIRE CAPITAL

Principal Figure In Delaware's Greates Scandal Released From Prison.

DOVER, Del., April 25.—William N. Boggs, formerly teller of the First National Bank of this city, and who, in 1889, was convicted of embessing $107,000 of the funds of that institution, was reidents of Dover are awaiting day, and residents of Dover are with interest his return home. The sentence was for five years, but it was commuted to four by President Roosevelt.

Delaware never had a greater scandal than the one which grew out of the de-falcations of young Boggs. It involved a United States Senator, Richard R. Kenney, who was twice placed on trial is the United States District Court, charged with improper use of the bank's money; a member of the Delaware State Legislature, Colonel Ezekiel Cooper, who died in prison while serving his sentence, and several other prominent citizens. Next to Senator Kenney, Boggs was the most conspicuous figure in the scan-

Without his aid the government never could have unraveled the tangled books of the Dover bank. He was a wonder at figures.

The fact that he stole more than the whole capital stock of the institution, in a very few years, right under the noses of the directors and the National Bank Examiner, is proof of his ability.

ggs was regarded as one of the most remarkable young men in Delaware. His system of carrying along balances and deficits without ever getting into a Boggs.

tangle, his cool head and quick judgment under the most trying circumstances, and his unerring judgment of human nature were wonderful.

Deserted by the men who had profited by his violations of the law and who had helped to place him in the position of a criminal. Boggs fied to South America June 1, 1897. Then the great defalcation was dis

A run was started on the bank, but the Richardsons, prominent in the can-ning industry here, put up money enough to make good the shortage. Tiring of his enforced banishment, Boggs returned in the spring of 1898 and himself up to the Federal author

With the aid of Boggs, the United States District Attorney began a vigorous prosecution of several of the mos prominent citizens of the state. The two trials of Senator Kenney, then a member of the United States Senate, were full of sensations and dramatic incidents. Upon each trial the jury disagreed. During the imprisonment of Boggs his wife has resided in this city, and most of her time has been devoted to efforts to bring about his release. It was she who visited the President and finally obtained a commutation of the sentence. She says that she and her husband have no definite plans for the future, but that
