

INMAN ACCEPTS

The acceptance of R. D. Inman of the nomination for Mayor of Portland on the Citizens' ticket was filed today by the executive committee of the Citizens' party.

Mr. Inman wrote a letter of acceptance immediately after his nomination for the office, but the committee did not file it because it was thought best to wait for the acceptance of Mr. Young, the candidate for Joint Representative with Clackamas County. Mr. Young's acceptance having been sent in, both names are now ordered to be placed on the official ballot.

Much comment has been made on the matter of Mr. Inman making the race for the office of Mayor. There was never any doubt on the subject, and Mr. Inman accepted the honor and responsibility as soon as it was officially offered him.

RAILROAD GOLF MERGER.

President E. H. Harriman, of the Southern Pacific railroad, met President E. P. Ripley, of the Santa Fe railroad early in April in Santa Barbara, California. Harriman was in California to inspect his railroad lines and see the country, and Ripley was there for the same purpose.

On Sunday afternoon Ripley called on Harriman, and while the two executives of the great railroad system were in conference reporters stood in breathless expectation of great things to be promulgated. The corridors of the Arlington hotel in Santa Barbara were crowded with important-looking men, who cast anxious glances at the heavy-weight financiers.

Ripley, after an earnest talk of five minutes with Harriman, arose to go and as he did so whispered something in a low voice.

"I'll go you!" suddenly shouted Harriman, slapping his leg.

"Tomorrow noon, I'll be there. And mind you, let us both be prompt. We don't want any delay in that matter."

"I'll be there on the minute," replied Ripley.

That the railroad presidents moved off separately, and the reporters made a wild rush for them. What was it that would take place at noon Monday? Was it a declaration of war between the railroads? Had a merger of the Southern Pacific and Santa Fe been formed? Something was up.

"I'll give you the whole story," said Harriman in his frank manner. "Ripley has challenged me. He wants to play a game of golf with me on the Country Club links at Montecito, and I have accepted."

Ripley was busy examining his sticks when appealed to, and gave the same reply.

Ripley is a devotee of golf, and has won quite a reputation at the game.

LIONS ENTERTAIN.

Only one thing marred the entertainment given last night at the Auditorium hall by the members of Home lodge of Lions, and that was the attempt to give the patrons too much for their money. Besides a literary and musical program of 17 numbers, each of which was duplicated by an encore, the Supreme Lecturer of the Independent Order of Lions embraced the opportunity afforded in talking to so many people in one place, and talking to them for more than half an hour on the beauties of fraternal insurance. This gratuitous speech was perpetrated before any of the features of the entertainment were executed and there was nothing left for the audience to do but to grin and bear it.

At half past nine o'clock the first number on a splendid program was called. Contributions were made by the Star Mandolin and Guitar Club, Professor Lovelace, the Norwegian Quartets and Miss Thomas in instrumental selections. T. A. Bowyer and J. N. Thomas gave several splendid exhibitions of their vocal skill and little Miss Hoopengardner delighted the audience with a very amusing dialect recitation. She was followed by Miss Hazel Brown in a similar role.

From the standpoint of real merit the most excellent feature of the evening was a reading by Miss Maud Howes, who more than any other amateur in the city never fails to delight her hearers with her intelligent rendition of anything she undertakes. Many professional people lack the dramatic ability that this young Portland girl always shows in her elocutionary work. Last night Miss Howes recited "Searching for the Blain," and as an encore gave "The Egyptian Flower Girl."

The entertainment was for the benefit of the family of a deceased member and was very liberally patronized.

TO EXTEND 'CYCLE PATH.

The Board of County Commissioners this morning made an order for the extension of the bicycle path from Twenty-second and Flanders streets out Flanders to Wilamette Heights. Bicycle riders of North Portland have been clamoring for this extension for some time. The path was started last year, but work was discontinued at Twenty-second street owing to lack of funds. City Engineer W. B. Chase will superintend the work. The path will have a cinch finish.

SIGNED AGREEMENT.

The Keith Oyster House signed the Walters' Alliance agreement yesterday afternoon, and placed a union card in the window. The proprietor stated that he is now satisfied that the union has come to stay, and that he should have taken such action sooner. This leaves but 12 non-union houses in the city, and it is believed that several of these will sign the union agreement at an early date.

Likes You If Cigar is Good.

A good cigar is always acceptable, and the man who gives it to you is liked while you smoke it. Candidates for office are wise in using only good cigars when they are extending the glad hand for votes, and they always secure excellent quality, at reasonable prices, from Sig Sichel & Co., 12 Third street.

AMERICANS LEAD

George H. Daniels Credits This to Railroads.

"Today an Englishman sits at his breakfast table, presided over by an American wife; he eats oranges or prunes from California, a cereal manufactured at Niagara Falls, a slice of bacon from the Mohawk valley, and his bread, of course, is from American wheat ground at Minneapolis," said George H. Daniels, general passenger agent of the New York Central, recently, at Cooper Union, paraphrasing and elaborating upon a recent English publication in this quotation from an address on "Railroads and Their Relation to Other Industries."

"On his way to his office he rides in a car built in New York, propelled by electrical machinery manufactured at Schenectady, over a railway constructed by American engineers and largely of American material.

"On reaching his office and looking about him he finds, if it is a modern, up-to-date establishment, this condition: He sits on a Nebraskan swivel chair, before a rolltop desk made in Buffalo; his letters are written on a Syracuse typewriter; he signs them with a New York fountain pen and dries them on a blotting sheet from New England; the letter copies are put away in files manufactured in Grand Rapids.

"Taking a day for pleasure, he attends the races, and sees the highest stakes won by an American horse, ridden by an American jockey. Looking over his evening paper he reads of the placing in American shippings of orders for American goods, styles, battalions, for European as well as Asiatic nations, and learns that the yacht for the German Emperor was built almost within sight of the City Hall of New York, and he wonders why it is that Americans are able to outstrip almost every other nation in modern manufacturing, and this wonder grows with each succeeding month."

Mr. Daniels gave to the railroads much of the credit for the great prosperity of the country during the last half dozen years. As an example of the reasons why the railroads have outstripped the canals he cited a record-breaking exploit of a few days ago. A boat loaded with grain from the West reached Buffalo last Saturday afternoon, while the Cedric of the White Star line was at her pier, about to sail with water for ballast, unless she could get a cargo of grain. The grain that reached Buffalo on Saturday afternoon was in the hold of the Cedric on Monday afternoon. This is a record which, Mr. Daniels said, never had been equaled.

At a meeting of the Greater Salem Commercial Club held here last evening it was unanimously decided to secure, if possible, the Supreme Lodge of the A. O. U. W. for lunch on the occasion of their trip up the Valley from Portland on June 16, and a communication was sent by the secretary looking to that end. A proposition was also advanced looking to the permanent and marked improvement of the city from the standpoint of beauty and this also was enthusiastically acceded to.

Horse and a Live Wire.

While a number of linemen of the City & Suburban Company were stretching a ground wire on East Belmont street, in Sunnyside this morning, they left one of the wires lying loose and when the delivery wagon of Martin & Forbes drove up, the wire was dragged along the street and brought in contact with the trolley wire, charging the former with a heavy current and frightening the delivery horse.

The animal backed up against a four-horse truck, dragging the charged wire with him. The truck horses received the full benefit of the shock and began to prance around like a cake-walk.

Luckily there was no more damage done for the wire was swinging around through the air at a lively rate.

These are the figures as they should have appeared yesterday. It is unnecessary to explain how the error crept in. A mistake of this sort was made before, and the number of people who reported the "fault" to the Journal evidenced the great interest taken in the Fair location.

Day after tomorrow the Fair directors will meet to consider the question of location. Today and tomorrow everybody in Portland ought to cast a ballot. The vote should be swelled by tens of thousands. Everybody should have a say.

The vote now stands:

This banquet was tendered to those who obtained members to the junior department. Enthusiasm ran high and the association felt very given with a will. The "Rustlers," of which Charles N. Winacott is the leader, secured the largest number of members and accordingly were the victors of the occasion.

The Theaters

MARQUAM.

Mr. Willard was seen last night in The Professor's Love Story, the pleasing comedy of J. M. Barrie. To those who had been so deeply impressed the evening before with his serious-almost tragic personation as the Cardinal, it was hard to reconcile the change to comedy; but in the pleasing situations were unfolded from act to act, the audience realized the wonderful versatility of the actor and praised him highly. It is a long drop from the more serious, more difficult characterization of the evening before, but Mr. Willard accomplishes it to the entire satisfaction.

The theater should be crowded the remainder of the week as the Love Story will be given. There will be a Saturday matinee.

Madame Zesler, the greatest woman pianist in the world, will be heard at the Marquam next Monday evening. Seats will be on sale tomorrow.

THE BAKER.

Franklin Fyles' great war play, Cumberland, will be the attraction at the Baker theater for the coming week. Cumberland, '61, deals with a beautiful love story in the South during the Civil War. As the plot is laid in the South, this gives ample opportunity for beautiful scenery and stage setting. The Baker has earned quite a reputation in that line since the engagement of the Stuart company, but Mr. Baker promises that next week's production will eclipse all his former efforts. This is the first time that Cumberland '61 has been produced on the Northern Coast, as few companies can afford to play it, owing to the heavy royalty. It had a long and successful run in all the larger Eastern cities, and in New York in particular. The Stuart company will be cast to great advantage, and all lovers of the war drama should avail themselves of this opportunity to see a great play produced by a great company.

CORDRAY'S

For a midweek evening the performance of The Cannon's Mouth by the Cooley company at Cordray's last evening was fairly attended. The Cannon's Mouth, which is not unknown to theatergoers of Portland, is the story of an old deserted cannon that had been abandoned by the army in New Mexico. Through the mouth of the old cannon an American prospector named Bob Maxwell drops by an accident onto the location of a fabulously rich mine, and is the envy of the whole region. As Bob Maxwell, Frank Cooley leaves nothing else in the part to be desired. The work of Sudd Wills, who, as Nancy's cousin, gets into numerous love entanglements, scores a complete success. As Chester Carlton, Bob's partner, Frank Redick seems to be perfectly at home. Terry McKean as Lopez Maquire brought forth constant applause. Obed Gardner, the coroner, as played by Perry Banks, was one of the laughable features of the evening.

John Griffiths, the renowned "Mephisto," will be the attraction at Cordray's the first half of the coming week in a superb production of Goethe's Faust. The engagement opens on Sunday evening for five performances, including Saturday matinee. Thursday, Friday and Saturday nights Mr. Griffiths will be seen for the first time in Portland in a romantic comedy-drama, A King's Rival. Miss Kathryn Furnell, spoken of by the press as one of the most beautiful women on the American stage, is Mr. Griffiths' leading support this season. She will be seen as Marguerite. The company also includes Mr. Fred Mangue in the title role, and the balance of the support is sure to be excellent.

The spectacle will be put on without curtailment or elimination of any kind, the stage of Cordray's theater having ample space for productions of this magnitude.

MELODRAMA DEFINED.

Interesting Chat With Mr. Willard, the English Actor.

"My ambition," said Mr. Willard, who this playing at the Marquam theater this week, the other day, "is not confined to melodrama. No real melodrama, as it was originally interpreted, is played at the present day. Perhaps Wagner's operas are the nearest approach to the genuine melodrama of the past. Any play that expresses anything more violent than drawing-room emotions is now classed as melodrama. The old definition of the word was a drama in which music was one of the chief elements and expressed the different passions and emotions of the characters, frequently taking the place of words. Music was made the medium for an expression of almost anything; there was very little dialogue, and the greater part of the book was made up of instructions to the musicians, as for example, 'Pedro stinks on his knees—music expressive of an appeal to the Almighty.' There is a famous story of old Alexander, who had the Dunlop Street theater in Glasgow, giving instructions to the leader of his orchestra one day about the production of a new piece. 'Now, Mr. Richardson,' said he, 'this is a rural scene—a country garden. Everything is placid and calm; all the delights of country life want to be fully brought before the minds of the audience, and I think you had better give me a little music expressive of clothes drying in the wind.' Though somewhat comic, that is a good illustration of the central idea in the mind of a manager of the olden time when about to produce a new melodrama.

Election Notices.

Deputy County Clerk A. N. Gamba today commenced making up the mail of the election notices that will be sent out in a day or two. The notices are made of white cloth. The names of the state, county and city officers to be filed at the election to take place June 2, 1902, are given. They will be mailed to the judges and clerks of elections of each precinct.

Do not delay trying the Peacock Hour, you will never regret it.

WHAT COURTS SAY IS LAW

If a man kisses or embraces a woman without her consent, he is guilty of assault and battery, holds the Supreme Court of Alabama, in the case of Walker vs. State (21 So. Rep. 467).

SLOT MACHINE GAMBLING.

A nickel in the slot machine, involving in its operation the element of chance as to whether the player obtains in cigars more or less than the value of his money, is held by the Supreme Court of Minnesota, in the case of State vs. Woodman (67 Pac. Rep. 1118), to be a game of chance, and to be prohibited by the statute forbidding nickel in the slot machines "for money, checks, credits, or any representative of value, or for any property or thing whatsoever."

TRADE MARK CAN'T BE SOLD.

A trademark is not by itself such property so as to be transferred and the right to use it can not be assigned, except as incidental to the transfer of the business or property in connection with which it has been used, holds the United States Circuit Court of Appeals, in the case of MacMechan Pharmaceutical Co. vs. Denver Chemical Mfg. Co. (113 Fed. Rep. 463). A transfer of the right to use it in connection with a different article, or one of a different manufacture, would result in deceiving the public as to the article or its origin, which it is the sole legitimate purpose of a trademark to prevent, and a transferee will not be protected in such use by a court of equity.

BANK PROTECTS DEPOSITORS.

A bank is in duty bound to honor the check of a depositor, and it can not refuse to do so on the ground that the money deposited belongs to some other person, or that the title of the depositor to it is defective, holds the Supreme Court of Nebraska in the case of Nebraska Bank vs. Ingersoll (89 N. W. Rep. 518). Deposits in a bank create between it and the depositor the relation of debtor and creditor, and the obligation of the bank is to pay all of the depositor's checks upon the funds. A banker is not required to protect the rights of third parties or to initiate any inquiry between himself and the customer.

DRUNKENNESS AN EXCUSE.

Though drunkenness is, in general, no excuse for crime, the Court of General Sessions of Delaware, in the case of State vs. Snow (51 Atl. Rep. 607), holds that one accused of breaking and entering a dwelling house with intent to steal, who through intoxication is in such a stupor as to believe in good faith that he is entering another house where he resides, can not be convicted of either phase of the offense; he is merely guilty of breaking and entering.

RESPONSIBLE FOR SIGNATURE.

A man by the name of Natty subscribed $1,000 to a subscription paper to build a church, and signed as follows: "Natty Family, $1,000." He refused to pay and was sued. Among other defenses he contended that the signature is not binding on him, as it is meaningless and void. Judgment was rendered against him, and on appeal the Supreme Court (Nebraska), Hodges vs. Natty, 89 N. W. Rep. 585 affirmed the judgment and held that the subscriber was bound by the signature he adopted to the same extent as though he had signed his full name.

LIQUOR DEALER NOT LIABLE.

Mere knowledge on the part of a liquor dealer that the purchaser is buying the liquor for the purpose of selling it in a prohibitory district will not render the transaction illegal, but there must be in addition some participation by the dealer in the illegal purpose and act. (Bibbenthal vs. McWhorter, 21 So. Rep. 569, Sup. Court, Alabama).

PASS BARS DAMAGES.

A person who rides on a railroad pass, given without consideration and after assent to conditions that he should assume all risk of accident, and that the carrier should not be liable, can not recover on it for injuries from negligence of its servants, holds the United States Circuit Court, Maine, in the case of Duncan vs. Maine Cent. R. Co. (113 Fed. Rep. 586).

HELD TO BE GAMBLING.

Playing cards in a strip of woods a quarter of a mile in length in a pasture about a mile from a public road, is held by the Supreme Court of Alabama in the case of Russ vs. State (21 So. Rep. 559) to constitute gaming in a public place within the meaning of the statute.

LIFE.

Two children were playing on a lawn before a house, within whose portals stood a gorgeous footman, powdered and dignified, wearing a green and gold livery. The face of the little girl was like a half-opened bud, sweet and fresh. A pair of wondering blue eyes looked out from beneath an aureole of golden hair. A tilt in the tiny round face gave it a look of simplicity and wonderment. The boy's figure was lithe and graceful, his eyes dark and flashing.

"Wees no play any more," said she, nestling up to him. "I'd fired. Is oo no 'sweepy? Wees play at pa and ma when I's had a 'sweep," and taking the boy's hand, and laying the little golden head on his shoulder, she was soon fast asleep.

After a few minutes she woke up with a start.

"Oo, Frank, I's had such a funny dream!" she exclaimed. "I's dreamed wees pa and ma, and wees was great big like them! Oo was a soldier, and oo had great big shiny boots, and a big, big sword!"

Her eyes beamed with delight. Taking the boy's hand in her own plump little one, she put the dimpled little mouth up to his face.

"Would oo like to marry me when I's big like mamma, and oo's a great big sword?"

"Of course I'll marry you," he declared, rising, and flourishing a tiny saber.

A girl of 18 and her companion were standing on a rustic bridge spanning a little silver stream that trickled through a certain nobleman's grounds. The scent of roses hung heavy on the air and the tiny rivulet shimmered in the moonlight.

"The man spoke."

"I are you sorry I'm going away tomorrow, Vi?"

"Yes, Frank."

"Very sorry, Vi?" in a crooning voice.

"Yes, Frank, very sorry." Keeping her eyes riveted on the water.

Canadian frog meat comes south in great quantities during the summer, and the dealers buy when the price is low and put the legs in cold storage, paying as low as 15 cents per pound. In the New York fish market large frogs brought in November 15 cents per pound. As the winter advances the price goes higher until they reach in the neighborhood of $1 per pound. Thousands of pounds are now frozen in cold storage, where they have been held since the spring and summer. The legs of a large frog will weigh about one-fourth pound, although occasionally some weigh one-half pound.
