

CHARLESTON EXPOSITION

Will Close With a Balance to the Good.

(Journal Special Service.) CHARLESTON, S. C., May 31.—The South Carolina Interstate and West Indian Exposition ends at 11 o'clock tonight...

WASHINGTON GOSSIP

WASHINGTON, May 30.—Everything is garden parties in Washington now.

GARDEN PARTIES ALL THE RAGE. The most beautiful garden in Washington is the Townsend place on Massachusetts avenue...

The Depew garden is the old Corcoran place on H street. Calvin Brice was one of its tenants and paid $10,000 a year for it...

MASON'S SEAT JUST FITS HOPKINS. Representative Albert J. Hopkins has been receiving congratulations on what is generally regarded as his certain coming to the United States Senate...

KICK AGAINST FULLER. It is a cause of great annoyance to lawyers and litigants having business before the United States supreme court that chief justice Fuller will not straighten out his neck and open his mouth when delivering decisions...

CONSERVATISM OF CULBERSON. Senator Charles A. Culbertson of Texas has the name of being a very conservative man and Charlie Edwards, secretary of the Democratic congressional committee, tells a story to prove it...

UNCLE CANNON BUYS GOLD BRICK. Uncle Joe Cannon knows a great many things; but one thing he does not know about is mahogany. The revered chairman of the committee on appropriations had charge, with young Euloid Woods, superintendent of the capitol, of the work of fitting up the hall of representatives and the many committee rooms...

SEVERIDGE'S KEYNOTE SPEECH. Senator Beveridge's keynote speech is in demand as a campaign document. Idaho has sent for 10,000 copies. Washington has sent 20,000 and Oregon has 30,000. In the separate publication which has been put out by the Republican manager there is a paragraph on the title page which reads: "The issues—harmony with the industrial development of the nation; the capture of foreign markets for the American factory and farm; the onward march of the Republican world power."

Is It Rose Scale? George Lamberson has received a rose bush from E. Deyrell of Linnton, who says that the bush is afflicted with a new variety of rose scale. The disease has spread to nearly all the bushes in his neighborhood, and he sent it to Portland to see what was the matter with it. Mr. Lamberson says that he could not find any scale on the bush but has sent it to Professor Cordley, entomologist of the Agricultural College at Corvallis, and is awaiting the result of his examination with a great deal of interest.

MAZAMAS

Preparing for Their Annual Outing.

Arrangements for the annual Mazama outing are rapidly assuming definite shape. A committee consisting of Colonel L. L. Hawkins and Albert J. Capron, together with the official photographer, L. J. Hicks, have returned from Trout Lake, where it is proposed to make headquarters, preparatory to ascent.

This outing promises to be the banner number of the series, beginning with that of Mount Hood in 1894, and extending down to this year. Some 224 persons have made the ascent of the seven peaks, which the Mazamas hold to their credit—this, too, without a single accident.

Mount Adams, the objective point for 1902, is one of the grandest of all the many high peaks of the Rockies, and it is expected that not less than 200 will join the expedition. The trip to Trout Lake will be made by boat to White Salmon, thence by wagons to the destination. En route, aside from the beautiful scenery along the Columbia, those joining the outing will have a ride through 25 miles of virgin forest along gashing streams and over a splendid road, free from bumps and jogs. Arriving at Trout Lake, the day following that on which the start is made, a beautiful camping ground, with tents already for the guests, will be found in a shady nook along the banks of the roaring Trout Creek. Mountains, streams, caves, both lava and ice, great forests and everything the eye can desire will be found on your doorstep "for waiting" to be looked at.

The Mazamas have done much to promote interest along their chosen lines, preservation of forests, streams, and the wonders of nature which lie about us. For many years their squibbers have been endeavoring to secure the setting aside by the government of the Crater Lake region as a national park, and now have the satisfaction of seeing their work completed by the recent act of Congress whereby this region is withdrawn from settlement.

This season's outing, which will begin July 1 and last 10 days, will be an inexpensive one, owing to certain arrangements which are now being made. Those who desire to go may do so whether Mazamas or not, although those who make arrangements with them directly can secure a lower rate.

As usual, several scientific men will with the party and evening camp-fire lectures will be one of the features. Friends are invited to leave dull care for a few days and get close to Dame Nature by joining the Mazama outing for 1902.

SMALL COST

School Children's New List of Books Needed.

The following is the correct list of books and their cost, required by a child who completes the full eight-year course of instruction in the public schools in accordance with the state course of study. The total cost of books for eight years, according to the list, is $13.68 or an average of $1.71 per year. The list has been compiled by J. H. Ackerman, superintendent of public instruction:

Table listing books and costs for first through eighth grade. Includes items like Wheeler's Graded Reader, Fry's Complete Geography, and various copy books.

Knew the Martins.

J. Allen Harrison, local agent for the Lewis River Transportation Company, was well acquainted with Herbert and Ivy Martin, who were drowned Thursday near Kalama. About 10 years ago Mr. Harrison taught school in the Cloverdale district, near Kalama, and they were among his pupils. He says that Miss Ivy was a sweet little lady of a charming disposition, and a great favorite with her associates. He describes Herbert as a noble young fellow and a perfect gentleman.

NEW YORK FASHION LETTER

NEW YORK, May 31.—Although the season is now well advanced, fashion's horn of plenty seems not to have been perceptibly diminished, and there are many things in the line of gowns and their details that are yet new.

Thin fabrics are ever an active province for improvement and the variety that has been added to batistes and muslins within the last few weeks is really marvellous. The most recent innovation in batiste shows a lace effect, which figures largely in combination with silk and satin foulards, peau de soie, taffetas and other silks, for vests, revers, berthas, collarettes and other portions of the bodice and sleeves.

In silk muslins there is a new shade of soft cerise, with embroidered dots of all colors scattered over the surface. A gown of this sort is especially attractive over cream or white silk and has a style that is unequalled by any of the brighter colors.

TRANSVERSE TUCKS. But for simplicity, nothing is so complete as a pure white silk muslin gown laid in transverse tucks and made without a touch of other trimming. The tucks, half an inch wide, stretch in wanting effect and arranged to meet evenly at the front. Below the knees there are two graduated flounces of the same material, which are in turn decorated with very fine ruffles, hemstitched, and gathered through the center, to simulate the effect of ruffling.

The bodice is laid in narrower tucks, which run round the figure. While not specially becoming to the woman of full figure, no design of the year is more charming for women who are tall and slender.

The neck is delicately finished with a stock of silk muslin, which falls in a back under the neck of the bodice. A very pretty belt confines the bodices of summer gowns composed of alternate bands of lace and ribbon. The latter material is thin and very shimmering. A new fashion for a necktie is two large white handkerchiefs attached to the neck by the streamers, though at the same time the handkerchiefs are through a gold ring in the most unobtrusive way.

ROSE CHIFFON. All white muslin and silk muslin frocks are delicately trimmed with rose chiffon embedded in a soft little cushion of soft silk. These are applied over the entire skirt and bodice. The effect is chic and were it not for the immense amount of handwork required in making the flowers and their settings the fashions would be one of the least expensive ones of the year. A silken lining, too, would be an item of expense, but this is not a necessity, as some of the prettiest designs of the year are built upon foundations of ordinary white lawn.

WASHABLE KID GLOVES. Very appropriate for summer wear are the washable kid gloves in eye, introduced for the outing girl. These are doubly welcome on account of being perspiration-proof. They are of glass kid and come in a wide variety of light shades. Those who have a preference for combinations will find their taste appealed to effectively in the black gloves stitched with white and fastened with one conspicuously big pearl button.

It is no longer a novelty to have the monogram engraved upon the glove buttons, but it is new and decidedly smart to have the clasps of elbow length gloves composed of thin rings of dull gold or burnished silver into which are set circles of pearl or ivory painted with miniature of beautiful paintings by any or several of the masters. The vogue is costly but quite the most exclusive innovation of the season in this direction.

IT'S A CREDIT

To Portland, Is This Thriving Industry.

One of the most thriving industries in this city today is the Troy Laundry of which Mr. John Tait is manager. It was established in 1888 and incorporated in 1891. In the same year it was consolidated with the Cascade and the Crescent laundries, and in 1899 moved to its present location.

PEAT FOUND NEAR NOME

According to Captain E. M. Oederbergh, general superintendent of the New York Metal and Reduction Company, which has extensive interests at Cape Nome, a large amount of peat has been found under the tundra of Cape Nome, a large quantity of gold being found with it. Peat is a substance of vegetable origin, consisting of roots and fibrous remains of various stages of decomposition. When dried it is very often used for fuel. Mr. Oederbergh brought a large piece of peat on his return from New York, where he has been on business connected with his company. The specimen looks a great deal like a piece of blood sausage, and is as hard as rubber. Now that the fuel problem has been solved, Mr. Oederbergh thinks that a great many of the deserted camps in the Nome region will again make good gold producers.
