

KINDER-GARTENS

Should Be Part of Public Schools.

Hon. C. E. Wood, when asked by The Journal to give his views on public kindergartens, strongly advocated them, saying:

"As the twig is bent so is the tree inclined. Kindergartens should be part of our public school system, to bend the little twigs toward the right."

"The boy is the father of the man. He should be started right, and kindergartens should be part of our public school system."

"The girl of today is the mother of the next generation. She should be trained right at an early age, and kindergartens should be a part of our public school system."

"We spend thousands on a high school, which is the end of the public school career. We leave the beginning to chance, and too often to the gutter. Yet the beginning is more important than the end."

"Many people think every one should be left to get his own education, and that little children should get their education at home. That will be true when the opportunities of life are equal to all. But, in spite of the shallow talk to the contrary, they are not equal. Meanwhile, the boy becomes a voter and the girl a mother, and if it is to the interest of the state to see that the boy and girl are educated morally, mentally and physically, childhood is the impressionable age. What is learned in the early years sticks. Therefore it is found that a kindergarten course shows the whole school life of the child from birth to three years, and the little twigs begin to bend at that age."

"The child under six is not an undisciplined being, but a public school system should be able to deal with him. It is the kindergarten that should be the first step in the public school system, the advanced step being to take the child about five to seven years of age on each $100 of taxable property. But a man ought to be ashamed to count the cost of doing his duty by the little ones."

"It is those who have not leisure and rosy homes who will and ought to profit most by the kindergarten system. Therefore the laboring men and women should see that a full vote is polled for the free kindergartens."

"If the proposition is not carried now, these men and women who have hitherto been giving their time and money in support of free kindergartens intend to stop it. Why should they go on at their own expense in a work which, if it will then seem, the people do not want? Get out between 3 and 4 next Monday and vote for the kindergartens."

MISS CASE'S RECITAL.

The song recital given at Parsons Hall last night attracted a large and well-pleased audience. The concert opened with a selection by the male quartet, Messrs. Boyer, Hogue, Zan and Montgomery. There is no quartet in the city holding the prestige of this, and it is well deserved. They sang Romeo's lullaby (Neldinger), and were heartily applauded. Miss Mary Case then sang. It being her first appearance in Portland. She is a charming girl, and most graceful. She has an excellent stage presence, and her appearance was enhanced by her appropriate costumes of red, which well suited her dark complexion and dainty face. With the singing of her first song, "Lovely Spring," by Cozzani, she aroused interest that increased with later appearances. Her voice is pure contralto, and never a syllable is lost through the range of music. Before the evening was over the audience was fairly fascinated with her music. She sang a double number, with Mr. Zan, but she is heard best in solos, as her voice is not heavy enough for the parts of a duet. There is sympathetic infection to her tones that almost brought tears to the eyes when she sang, "Oh Mother Mine," and "Little Boy Blue." As encore she sang a German lullaby and a Scotch ballad. The quartet sang "Off to the Silly Night" with grand effect and Miss Case gave three selections from Neldinger. Mr. Zan's rendition of "Israfel" was fine, and was in contrast with the last song he gave, "Where 'Ere You Go," a beautiful composition by Somers. His voice may not have been its best glory, but there is no opportunity for criticism in his delivery. Miss Case gave the concluding number, "Oh, Rest in the Lord," by Mendelssohn, that was a perfect sermon in its depth of feeling. The accompanist was Mr. Edgar Courson, and his ability was recognized also in the applause given the others.

Henry Austin Adams, the prominent Catholic lecturer, delivered his first address last night at the Baker Theatre to a large audience that gave marked attention to his discourse on the life of the great Englishman, Cardinal Newman, his history of the incidents and influences of the life of this great man were interesting, yet not so much so as his comment upon them. He is an excellent speaker, and will be heard all week on subjects that will prove as interesting as the first. His theme tonight is "The Middle Ages."

The judges and clerks must be residents of the wards in which the votes are cast, and must be taxpayers.
