At Marlborough House When King Edward Receives His Coronation Honors.

(Journal Special Service.) LONDON, June 19.—The decorations at Marlborough House are so arranged that after dark it will be possible to use them for illuminations. A beautiful arch of cut crystal, in the form of a branch of laurel leaves, has been erected over the gates. The crystal is of various natural tints, and is, so to speak, jeweled with ruby berries. Rising from the center of the arch is a crystal medallion, beside the Garter and the motto of that ancient order. The King's cypher appears in the center of the medallion and is surmounted by the royal crown and lion.

KAISER LIKES CHARLEMAGNE

(Journal Special Service.) BERLIN, June 19.—Recalling his historic pilgrimage to the Holy Land in its vivid and striking imagery, was the visit of the Kaiser to Aix la Chapelle today. In order to give more brilliancy to the occasion the imperial suite camped outside the walls from midnight to daybreak, when the party entered the city on horseback, the Kaiser dressed as Charlemagne. He was preceded by heralds trumpeting his arrival and followed by a company of feudal lords, all costumed as their ancestors were in the Middle Ages. At the city gates a body of Notables delivered to the Kaiser the symbolic keys on a crimson cushion, and the cortege then proceeded through the mediæval part of the town. After a solemn visit to the cathedral the Kaiser was escorted to the town hall, the ancient headquarters of Charlemagne, where he met the authorities and notables of the town.

FOUND A RELATIVE

J. I. Corbin Discovers a Cousin At The Dalles.

(Journal Special Service.) THE DALLES, June 19.—A little over a week ago J. I. Corbin arrived here from Northern Pennsylvania, with the intention of locating permanently. Being a friend of Robert Lowe, who lives about 10 miles from the city, he went at once to his place to visit. One day in looking over some photographs he noticed the name of Gifford, photographer, and remembering that somewhere in the West he had a cousin by that name whom he had never seen, the young man determined to visit the gallery, hardly dreaming this was the relative. But so it proved, and Mr. Gifford was delighted to see him.

A CONGRESS IN INLAND EMPIRE

Gov. McBride Continues His Fight Against Roads.

(Journal Special Service.) COLFAX, June 19.—The proposition to have a meeting of delegates from the farms, the banks and the business houses of the Inland Empire, with the railroad managers, for the purpose of discussing freight rates, meets with general approval in this part of the country. Farmers are in favor of it and so are the business men. The suggestion that such a move may result in a reduction of freight rates in time to effect the crop of 1902 is a powerful incentive to those interested to make concessions in order to have a reduction in rates made prior to the meeting of the Legislature, which would not affect this year's crop. Governor McBride is here and is making the acquaintance of farmers and business men, regardless of party affiliations, and his announcement that he will continue the fight until the desired results are obtained is encouraging to the farmers and merchants, who endorse his policy without regard to partisan politics. The farmers feel that they are now in a fair way to secure concessions, and express a belief that the railroad companies will be willing, in the face of the stand taken by Governor McBride, to grant concessions before the meeting of the Legislature.

PLAYED CHESS ON THE HIGH SEAS

By Means of Wireless Telegraphy—Cunard's Enterprise.

(Scripps-McRae News Association.) NEW YORK, June 19.—The Cunard Line, the first to establish the wireless system of telegraphy on all of its steamers, inaugurated a unique feature of the Campana, which arrived this morning from Liverpool. On Tuesday, June 10, Operator Gannon got in communication with the American Line steamer Philadelphia, bound to this port from Southampton. The Philadelphia was about 20 miles ahead of the Campana. After passing the usual courtesies, the Campana suggested a game of chess, which was agreed to by the Philadelphia. Notice was posted in the music room of the Campana and a passenger was found to play. The Philadelphia announcing readiness, the game commenced at 2 o'clock in the afternoon and lasted till 6:45 o'clock in the evening and great interest. At that time the Campana came in touch with her sister steamer, Lucania, bound to Liverpool from New York, and was obliged to attend to business communication and suspend the chess game. When the game stopped the Campana man had the best of it and would have won.

A UNITED EMPIRE

(Journal Special Service.) LONDON, June 19.—Archibald R. Colquhoun's paper, just read before the Colonial Institute, was an able and a comprehensive survey of the future policy of the British Empire as essentially a colonial policy. It was not an alarmist paper, but a cool and well-reasoned argument, pointing to the conclusion that the empire must be bound together by federation. Mr. Colquhoun advocated, with the approval of a large and intelligent audience, a closer commercial union be-

BAWKINS NOT TO COME BACK

Seattle Not Able to Prove Murder Against Him.

(Journal Special Service.) OLYMPIA, June 19.—John Hay, Secretary of State, has wired Governor McBride asking if the state desired to extradite Arthur Bawkins, who is wanted for the murder of his father, whose bleached bones were found on the Applegate ranch near Auburn some months ago. Sheriff Oudhee of Seattle had some time ago advised the London police to be on the lookout for Bawkins and arrest him. Upon investigation it developed that the authorities of King County cannot prove a case of murder against Bawkins, but wished the London police to pick him up and endeavor to obtain a confession. This it seems they will not do, refusing to make the arrest unless the State of Washington will extradite him with or without confession, and so the matter will be dropped without the issuance of international extradition papers.

DOES MR. CLEVELAND WANT OFFICE AGAIN?

Man of Destiny Once More Appears in the Political Arena for a Speech.

(Journal Special Service.) NEW YORK, June 19.—For the first time since his retirement from the Presidency, Grover Cleveland tonight delivers a speech to a political audience. The occasion that draws the former President from his home at Princeton to New York is the opening of the new home of the Tilden Club, Broadway near Seventy-fourth street. That the gathering is of great political significance goes without saying, for it is well known that Mr. Cleveland could not be induced to deliver a political address unless he were convinced that it would have an important bearing on the future welfare of his party. This fact is universally recognized and as a consequence those who take an interest in National politics are manifesting intense interest in the meeting.

PREPARING FOR THE EDUCATORS

(Journal Special Service.) MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., June 19.—Applications for accommodations indicate that the convention of the National Educational Association, to be held in this city early next month, will be the largest as well as the most representative gathering of its kind ever held in this country. The South noticeably will be better represented than ever before, while Canada will send several of her most distinguished educators to take part in the proceedings. The program of the general sessions and the numerous departmental conferences is rapidly nearing completion. It includes the names of more than 100 of the leading educators of America, among them being presidents of universities, State Superintendents of Public Instruction, and teachers in the public schools. The recent death of President John Henry Barrows of Oberlin College removes a prominent worker of the association and a feature of the opening session of the convention will be the adoption of appropriate resolutions in honor of his memory.

SHOT HIS OWN HAND

Way to Save Himself From Snake Poison.

(Journal Special Service.) DAYTON, Wash., June 19.—To save his life from the effects of a rattlesnake bite, Jas. McKenzie, a ranchman of the Tukanoon country, held the muzzle of his revolver to his hand and shot away the affected part. He will live. McKenzie had lain down on his stomach to drink from a spring when a rattler drove its fangs into his hand. There are no doctors in the Tukanoon country, which is a wild, broken district in the eastern part of Columbia County. McKenzie saw death staring him in the face as his hand began to swell rapidly. His knife was too dull to cut out the injured part of his hand, and there were no caustics near. In desperation the ranchman finally drew his big revolver and literally shot away a portion of his hand. The shot made a terrible wound, but the poisoned blood gushed forth and McKenzie's life was saved. It was 48 hours later before the plucky ranchman reached Dayton to have his wound dressed.

Conestine is under arrest here charged with being at the head of a conspiracy to kidnap the children of a number of wealthy families. NEW YORK, June 19.—Bourke Cochrane argued so eloquently before Judge Clark in the Supreme Court today that when he was through the Judge turned to the lawyer and said: "I desire to say that you have charmed and illumined me." The arguments were in support of orders for the examination before trial of James B. Duke and Thomas Ryan, millionaire tobacco men, in action begun by George P. Butler and Susan K.
