Paul F. Mohr has been in Spokane for the greater part of the week. He was interviewed by the Chronicle there relative to his long-delayed portage road, and is thus quoted by that paper; "We are not yet in funds, but we hope to be." Continuing, Mr. Mohr said:

"The report that we had already purchased the rails on the right of way is not correct. They have been bought in by Hofins & Co. of Seattle, who are holding them till we have an opportunity to turn around.

"The Columbia River Company is being organized to take over the assets and complete the work. The opposition of powerful railway interests makes it impossible for us to secure the funds from large money centers. The money must be subscribed by the men who are to be benefited by the road. It is too late now to complete the road this year, but later we hope to show results."

Mr. Mohr's faith in the ultimate success of his plan is of that never-dying and persistent quality that augurs well for eventual success. There is no question whatever but that once the portage road gets into oppartion, it will open up a territory the traffic from which will reach enormous proportions. At present this cannot be touched, for lack of facilities for transportation.
