

The FIELD OF SPORT

From a scientific point of view, the wrestling match last night at Turn Hall was a good one. Max Wiley, of Rochester, N. Y., and Joe Acton, ex-middle-weight champion of the world, were on the mat 45 minutes before the bout was decided, and they were working like lions all the time.

The Seattle Cricket Club is anxious to make a match with Portland, to be played at Portland during the month of August. They would also like Portland to visit Seattle in July.

AMUSEMENTS

THE BAKER—Another large house greeted the Pollard company at the Baker last evening to witness A Gaiety Girl. The little folks are perfectly at home in this tuneful operetta and the many catch songs which have been hummed and whistled in many lands were rendered in a manner which would do the clever children are happily cast and give one of their best performances. The scenery is in keeping and the costumes of the best. By special request a matinee will be given next Wednesday afternoon, when Pinafore will be the bill.

ROUNDING INTO TRIM.

Jack Day, manager of the Pastime Club, has been agreed on for referee of next Thursday evening's boxing contest at the Exposition building by the principals, Hegarty and DeCoursey.

Both have trained faithfully for the event and have expressed their determination to do things to each other when they get into the ring.

Hegarty who is featherweight champion of Australia, has been entertaining large audiences at his quarters at the Mikado ever since his arrival from San Francisco, 30 days ago, and though in perfect condition, he will continue training up to the day of the contest, as he does not want to take any chances on losing his weight forfeit of $250.00, which is held by the club. Tim is one of the best all-round trainers ever seen in Portland, his boxing and dumb-bell work is marvellous.

CRICKET.

The Portland Cricket Club meets for practice every evening on the Multnomah Field.

RACING AT OVERLAND.

DENVER, Colo., June 21.—The running meeting of the Overland Trotting and Running Association, which opens today, promises to be the most successful race meeting ever held in Colorado. Nearly 200,000 in stake and special races is offered. The event of the opening day is the Colorado Derby at one and an eighth miles.

FIGHTS IN LONDON.

NEW YORK, June 21.—Followers of the pugilistic game on this side of the water are awaiting with more amusement than interest the results of the so-called championship bouts to be pulled off in London during the coronation festivities.

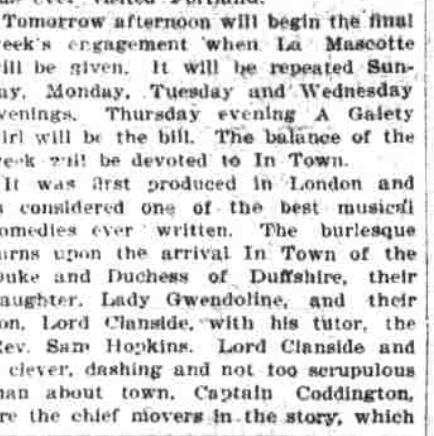

According to the program the series of events is to be inaugurated tonight with a so between "Spikie" Sullivan of America and Jabez White of England, for the 134-pound championship of the world. Those who are to mix it up during the coming week are "Denver Ed" Martin and "Bob" Armstrong, "Joe" Watcott and "Tommy" West, Frank Ernie and "Pat" Daly, and last and not least "Tom" Sharkey and "Gus" Ruhlin, who are slated to decide the heavyweight "championship."

It would be difficult to get together a more representative lot of "has-beens" than the American fighters named, while the few Britishers to appear are of no larger caliber, having taken their turn a long time ago at being walloped by second-raters from this side of the water.

POWELL RENOMINATED.

TRENTON, N. J., June 21.—The Republican Congressional convention of the new Fifth District, held at Belvidere today, resulted in the renomination of Congressman Charles N. Fowler, who now represents the Eighth District.

NAVIGATION OF THE DEAD SEA

The gradual opening up of Palestine to modern civilization is a theme of such essential fascination as to invest with special interest the prosaic and the intrinsically trivial announcement that leave has been given by the Turkish government to run steamers on the Dead Sea. The occasion is one for something more than mere sentimental surprise that the beating of the propeller should stir up the sluggish waters which cover the Cities of the Plain and "sing the song of steam" above the ruins of Sodom and Gomorrah. For there is an economic aspect of the matter that makes it worthy of attention. In 1897 a small steamer was placed on the Jordan and made the journey on the Tiberias to Jericho in five hours. Some three years prior to that two large sailing boats had been taken in sections by rail from Jaffa to Jerusalem, and thence by carts to the Jordan, where they were fitted out to initiate the navigation of the Dead Sea, being employed in gathering the bitumen which in the form of asphalt has since been utilized for paving London streets. That was the modest beginning. At that time a trading ferry across the lake was in project, but it is obvious that a steam circumnavigating service must offer infinitely greater facilities for commerce. The Land of Moab on the further side is a settled and comparatively prosperous region, with abundant supplies of cattle and corn, but the present caravan routes round either end of the lake are slow and inconvenient, so that intercourse is

Monument for Missouri Mules

In the Briton-Boer peace terms no mention is made to what became of the warlike Missouri mule. He will, of course, have to be called off on some terms or the war will go on with increased bitterness and augmented trouble and heartache for both sides. If there is any indemnity coming to anybody or anything, the Missouri mule ought to get a big slice of it. From all we can learn, he did most of the fighting.

Janizaries though they were, mercenaries, so to speak, rallying under the British colors for so much British gold, at the same time these mules fought like true and loyal subjects of his Majesty and in no instance were they known to turn their palm brush to the foe. If they get nothing more, they should at least receive honorable mention.

A little later, when the financial situation is less strained, if the English are at all appreciative of an ally who was ever in the forefront of the fight and fought on a mighty small allowance—24 cents, they will erect a monument to the Missouri mules whose bones lie bleaching in South Africa and feed those that remain on golden oats. The steeds of Apollo got that kind of glittering feed and did nothing practical at all.

Successful efforts have recently been made in Westphalia to induce the country people to retain their national costumes.

shifts in the second act from the vestibule of the Caravanserai Hotel to the green room of the Ambiguity Theater. It is the first night of a new burlesque. The scene gives much scope in the way of dress. Captain Coddington is in love. In a way, with Kitty Hetherington, prima donna at the Ambiguity Theater, for whom the old Duke has also a smacking fondness. From Coddington, Lord Clanside obtains the entrance into the green room and falls a victim to the charms of the principal dancer, Miss Flo Fancher.

Finally the Duchess, in search of her missing husband, appears in the green room also. Here obviously in enough material to spare for endless complexioners and the old grows fast and furious. All
