REAL ESTATE

When one asks the real estate brokers whether they are doing any business these days they assure the inquirer that they "are not doing much," and the record bears out their statement as a fact. Of course there are daily transfers, but none are for any very large sums. There seems to be plenty of little trades.

It is not that people have no money or that others do not desire to sell. Both parties to prospective contracts of bargain and sale in realty seem to be waiting until present local unsettled conditions shall have cleared away. When men are asked why they do not go on and buy and sell as before, they say: "Wait a little while. The strike has unsettled matters. We do not care to buy for improvement until matters have been

between employer and employe."

This seems to be the key note to the situation. Wherever there is the slightest indication of a lack of normal conditions, capital becomes timid, for those who handle money desire that no element of uncertainty shall embarrass their investments.

It is very encouraging to note that not a single man can be found who will say that he is other than hopeful of the outcome. Everybody feels that the statement which The Journal has made and frequently reiterated to the effect that the present depression will pass away in time and all will be as before, is well founded.

It is probable that when matters are again running in their normal channels and all delays shall have been removed, that whatever time has been lost will be made up, and perhaps more than made up, so that the will strike a pretty good average. This is the opinion of a man in the business and who ought to know what he is talking about.

As an evidence that some property is changing hands and at a fair figure, it may be noted that two fair sales were recorded Monday, both of which were made in East Portland. Lots 7 and 8 in block 225, East Portland, was sold by John Campbell and wife to Petronella M. Reisacher for $2500. The other East Portland sale Monday was also for $2500, Miles C. Moore et al. to William F. Ryan and wife, covering the east half of lots 5 and 6, block 116.

In outside acreage there was reported Monday the sale of 6¼ acres in section 6, township 1 north, range 1 east, by the University Land Company, to C. A. Lindquist, for $1500.

The same things which militate against real estate sales have equally as strong a bearing on and perhaps even more. As a consequence, there is an appreciable falling off in the matter of the number of building permits issued from day to day.

O. Johnson is erecting a two-story dwelling at East Twelfth and Thompson streets which will cost him $2100. At the corner of Beech streets and Vancouver avenue A. S. Ellis is putting up two small cottages at a cost of $1,000.

PANAMA HATS

How to Tell a Genuine From an Imitation.

There seems to be more interest taken in the subject of Panama hats this year than ever before.

They are distinctly the thing to wear, and their vogue is emphasized from the fact that they are a fashionable fad, and also the most sensible, durable and comfortable summer hats that are made. M. Sichel, the popular haberdasher of 288 Washington street, has just received a particularly interesting importation of genuine Panama hats. They are extra fine goods, and illustrate a few points about which the public should be informed, so that the average man may judge of the qualites of the real Panama hat, and also distinguish between it and imitations. The highest grade of Panama hats is called the Jipijapa hat, from the fact that Jipijapa is the name of an interior town in Equador where very fine specimens of the Toquilla plant grow, and where some of the very best Panama hats are woven. The leaf from the Toquilla is split by the natives and woven into hats. Men, women and children are trained from their earliest years in weaving, and come to be very expert as they grow older.

A great deal has been said and written about the Panama hat worth $100 and $250, but from the very nature of the case, very few excessively high grade hats can be made. A broken straw constitutes a flaw, straws not matching perfectly in color, and any knot that shows also constitute flaws. The high grade hat must have a very fine finish, which is an operation requirng much skill, as each overlapping fiber must be nicely turned back into the edge of the crown and trimmed off. The weaving can only be done in the early morning, as the fiber is hung out over night to absorb the dew so as to be in proper conditon for weaving. During the day it becomes too brittle. People who have long handled Panama hats can tell what locality the hat comes from by looking at the button in the crown. The button is the central portion of the crown, at which point the weaving begins and extends toward the edges. The genuine Panama hat is made from Paja Toquilla, meaning straw from the Toquilla plant, which straw comes from the leaf. All imitation Panama hats are made from grasses or weeds. One of the chief causes of expense in the genuine Panama hat is the bleaching of the straw, for, in order to produce an extra high grade hat, every fiber must be bleached to precisely the same degree of whiteness. The genuine Panama hat, as sold in America, can range in retail price anywhere from $7 to $250. They are called Panama hats because Panama is the chief port from which they are exported. There is a certain romantic interest in connection with Panama hats this year from the fact that every genuine hat has taken a more or less hazardous journey from its birthplace to the head of its wearer, the unsettled conditon of the governments in the southern countries, and the predominance of insurgents there being a standing menace to the conduct of commerce.

Answers Election Contest.

James Hillyard, road supervisor-elect on the Citizens' ticket for District No. 11, precinct 64, this county, today filed an answer to the notice of election contest, filed last week by Edward Littlepage, Independent-Republican candidate for the office.

Hillyard denies that there were any irregularities in the count of the votes as made by the judges and clerks of election, whereby Littlepage was counted out of 11 votes; denies that Littlepage received a majority of 13 votes; claims that the count as returned by the officials, namely, Littlepage 115, and Hillyard 124, is correct, and prays that the suit be dismissed and that the costs be assessed to the plaintiff.

A Misfit Inscription.

The Westminster Gazette appears pleased with Mr. Carnegie's "approval" of the inscription of the monument to Mr. Pitt in the Guildhall, "He lived without ostentation, and he died poor." If Mr. Carnegie knows nothing about Mr. Pitt's private life, the Westminster Gazette ought surely to be better instructed. Mr. Pitt simply let his affairs go to rack and ruin, and no man ever lived who was so frightfully robbed by his servants. He left debts to the amount of about £40,000, which were paid by the country, and this, assuredly, was not a creditable termination of his career, considering that he had no family, that during the greater part of his life he was in receipt of about £10,000 a year in salaries, and that he had the free use of two furnished houses (Downing street and Walmer Castle), besides many valuable perquisites.

NOVEL TEST FOR DEATH

Horror of being buried alive is common to the whole human race, and from time immemorial experiments have been in progress with the view of making such a terrible fate impossible. Some physicians maintain that satisfactory tests can also be made by the use of the Roentgen rays, but it is not every one who has the facilities for making such tests, whereas any one can make a test on the plan devised by Dr. Icard, a physician of Marseilles, France. The doctor uses fluorescin, the well-known coloring material, and his experiments have proved so successful that they have won for him the approval of the French Academy of Sciences. Fluorescin injected into the human body produces absolutely no effect if the body is dead, whereas it produces most suprising effect if the body is alive. Dr. Icard uses a solution of it, which is so strong that a single gramme is able to color 40,000 quarts of water.

If a little of this solution is injected under the skin of a living persons in two minutes the skin and especially the mucous membranes, will become much discolored and the person will present the appearance of one suffering from an acute attack of jaundice. Moreover, the eyes will become a greenish color and the pupils will almost become invisible. These symptoms will remain for one or possibly two hours and then will gradually disappear. Since fluorescin produces this effect on a living body, it naturally follows, according to Dr. Icard, that any body on which it produces no effect must be dead.—Cleveland Plaindealer.
