

FRANCE SEEKS BRITISH GOLD Paris Capital Will Buy Many Claims in Klondike.

(Journal Special Service.) VANCOUVER, B. C., July 11.—Count Carbonneau of Dawson has gone to Paris to arrange a sale of the Chute and Willis placer properties on Gold Run. An expert who recently went to Dawson to examine the mines has also gone to Paris to report. If the sale is negotiated the price will run into hundreds of thousands of dollars. The Chute and Willis properties are said to have paid one-sixteenth of the royalty received by the government from Klondike gold last year.

MONUMENT TO FRENCH ALLIES WAS KIDNAPED

(Journal Special Service.) NEWPORT, R. I., July 11.—The anniversary of the landing of French troops in America during the Revolution was commemorated today by a meeting of prominent citizens of Newport, at which active steps were begun looking to the erection of a suitable monument on the south shore of the harbor to mark the landing place. Fort Chastelux, which was occupied by the French troops here, stands at the top of a hill on land owned by Lorillard Spencer, and it was decided to use stone from this fort in the erection of the monument.

WALL STREET'S WAYS

(Journal Special Service.) WASHINGTON, July 11.—In the closing hours of every session of Congress bills are hurried through, many of them without being closely examined, and some of them are of a character that is far from desirable. The deliberate manner in which the first session of the 67th Congress was brought to a close prevented much of this kind of legislation from being enacted, but it has been discovered that the Wall Street brokers will profit to the extent of about $3,000,000 by the fact that a little "joker" was quietly attached to the bill refunding the war tax that had been paid by religious, charitable and educational institutions. The amendment, which was offered to a House bill in the Senate, remits the accrued war taxes on bonds deposited as collateral to secure call loans.

OREGON EXHIBIT IN JAPAN

At the meeting of the Lewis and Clark Fair directors this afternoon, the Board of Trade will request the corporation to appropriate a sum of money to send Col. Henry E. Doseh to Japan to represent Oregon and have charge of the Oregon exhibit at the Japan Industrial Exhibition to be held at Osaka in 1923. The reasons for this request by the Board of Trade are that the principal countries of Asia bordering on the Pacific Ocean will be represented at this exposition and by giving these people an opportunity to see what Oregon produces and also to make the acquaintance of our probable director of the Lewis and Clark Fair, more can be accomplished in the way of securing Oriental exhibits which will be made the main attraction of our 1926 Fair, and will contribute more to its success than the same amount of money expended in any other direction. As the O. R. & N. Company has promised free transportation for exhibits, the expense will be comparatively small, the total cost probably not exceeding $6,000.

Italian Child's Talent Leads to Her Abduction.

(Journal Special Service.) PHILADELPHIA, July 11.—Her wonderful talent for acting and singing, together with her beauty, made 13-year-old Filomena Patcone the mark for a man and woman, by whom, it is said, the child was stolen. Now the police are searching this city and New York for the kidnapers. The pair were actors in the stock company at the Italian Theater, Eighth street and Washington avenue. He was known as G. Mongareo, and she as Suetino, his sister. The child spent all the money she could get at the theater. With a memory said to be almost abnormal, she could retain the lines of every part, and would afterward repeat entire plays for her companions, changing actions and tones to impersonate the characters as the dialogue progressed. The Mongareos came across her one day on a street corner and heard her, spellbound. They made friends with the child and after that she attended rehearsals. One day the Mongareos closed their season, and that night Filomena did not return home. Investigation, it is alleged, showed that the Mongareos, on leaving the city, took with them the child. Filomena is described as a typical Italian beauty. She has lustrous black eyes, quantities of black hair, even teeth, and a beautiful complexion. She has a deep, rich contralto voice, and is almost a woman in development.

A NORTHWEST LAND BOOM

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., July 11.—In order to convince farmers that corn can be grown successfully in the Northwest, Minnesota and North Dakota land men and railroad industrial agents are promoting a large number of experiments in the Red River Valley and various sections of North Dakota. This has resulted in a considerable increase in corn acreage in the valley, 500,000 acres being the estimated corn acreage in North Dakota this year. The experiments are progressing satisfactorily and the indications are that the coming year as a result will witness the largest movement in the history of the Northwest.

HOW ANDERSON FELT ON A HUNDRED FOOT FALL

ST. PAUL.—John Anderson, the former naval jackie who, while painting iron-work beneath the high bridge a month ago, was severely injured by a fall, is rapidly recovering at the City Hospital. Both his thigh bones were broken, his left leg was fractured near the ankle, a portion of bone was torn from his right hip, and he was wounded about the crown of his head. But he will not be permanently maimed or disfigured. On the afternoon of May 20 he was swinging happily, like a bird on a twig, within a "sling" six feet below the roadway of the high bridge and about 100 feet above the Mississippi River. The seat of a swing is a short piece of plank. It is attached at each end to ropes, which, passing through a block, return to the sling as a single rope. By lengthening or shortening this rope the man in the sling can lower or elevate himself. "I was hanging close to one of the steel rods," said he yesterday, "a rod that I was painting. My rope was good and fast. I had no warning of any danger, when the sky and the clouds, and the bottom of the big bridge in the middle of it all, dashed past my eyes and the air whistled in my ears like a typhoon on the China seas. I knew I was going down head first. Now I wasn't frightened. I said to myself, 'Now I'll strike' the river before long, and if I keep going this way I'll hit the water head first, which will be just as good as diving; and being a good swimmer I can easily get ashore." I wondered, too, if I'd beat my usual "I wonder, Fanny, what little things a fellow will think about at these time instead of worrying about his own neck.

DELAYS DANGEROUS Postponement of World's Fair May Affect Two Lives.

(Journal Special Service.) ST. LOUIS, July 11.—A visitor to the publicity department of the World's Fair tells a somewhat amusing story of a fellow traveler he met on the Northern Pacific railway coming from the West. The conversation drifted to the postponement of the World's Fair to 1924. The Westerner remarked: "To tell the truth, stranger, I can't say that it is practical for the reason that one of the sweetest of Western roses has promised to marry me provided we spend our honeymoon at the World's Fair. All arrangements were perfected for the wedding day, and now she positively refuses to carry out the

GUNS ARE BARRED

(Journal Special Service.) COLUMBIA, S. C., July 11.—Owing to the operation of the law against pocket pistols, which went into effect on July 1, the South Carolina gentlemen are deprived of one of their most cherished inheritances, and there is a possibility that the bowie knife will replace the six-shooter. The smallest size firearm allowed by the law must be 20 inches long and weigh three pounds. Nothing in the law bars knives, and the sawed-off shotgun coming within the weight limit, therefore, armors expect a lively business in that line.

TREED BY A BUCK Plight of a Man Who Played Good Samaritan to an Injured Fawn.

ROULETTE, Pa., July 11.—Olen Bowles of Costello will never stop again to be Good Samaritan to a deer in trouble. He works for the big tannery company there. He was in the woods one day last week looking over a bark contract. Passing along an old woods road, he saw a fawn lying in a clump of bushes. As the fawn did not move, he walked up to it and found that it was bleeding from an injury in its shoulder. The wounded fawn home with him and doctoring it. Bowles was stooping to lift it up in his arms when the frightened little animal began bleating piteously. It had scarcely uttered its first cry when Bowles heard a commotion in the brush, and looking up, saw two deer, a big buck and a doe, bounding toward him. The buck had on a fierce front, the brittle on his neck standing erect and his eyes blazing with fury. Bowles hastily climbed a tree. He got out of range of the buck just in time to escape a savage lunge from his horns. The doe took the fawn away into the wood. The buck, however, stayed right at the foot of the tree and pranced and snorted around it at every move Bowles made, keeping him there until long after dark. When he thought the buck had gone away Bowles slipped down and out of the tree and started to put behind him the three miles that lay between that spot and home as quickly as his legs would let him. He hadn't gone 50 yards, though, before the buck was after him. Dodging from tree to tree, Bowles made his way along until a man answered his cries for help. Then the buck abandoned the chase.

BET CAUSED DISASTER

(Journal Special Service.) WOONSOCKET, R. I., July 11.—Miss Mabel Ward, 17 years of age, of Milford, Mass., made her debut as an aeronaut and received injuries from which she may die. Miss Ward ascended 300 feet and then pulled the parachute string. The parachute dropped 20 feet before it opened. She was unable to hold on and fell 60 feet to the ground. She received a compound fracture of the right leg, a fractured jaw and internal injuries. Later at the hospital her leg was amputated above the knee. She has only a slight chance for life. Miss Ward's plight resulted from a bet made a week ago. While watching an ascension she said to her escort that she could make the trip as easily as the aeronaut had done. "I'll bet you a box of candy you can't," he replied. "I'll do it," said the young woman. She told the aeronaut her plans and for several days received instructions from him. Her friends and family tried to dissuade her, but it was no use.

HAND WITH A QUEER HISTORY

(Journal Special Service.) NEW YORK, July 11.—A policeman of the West Sixty-eighth street station brought to the Morgue a small newspaper-wraper parcel and this report: "Twenty-sixth Precinct, July 4, 1902.—To the Morgue Keeper, Bellevue Hospital: Dear Sir—The skeleton of a hand herewith sent you was left at the residence of Hattie Jackson of 37 West Fifty-ninth street on July 2, 1902, to be called for on July 3 by one Midget Leonard, address unknown. When the Leonard woman failed to call for it, Mrs. Jackson opened the package and finding the contents threw it into the fire, but removed it again and it was brought to this station. Dr. McKelvey of Roosevelt Hospital informs me that it is an old skeleton hand, in use for a long time." The hand will be sent to the potter's field for burial.

A QUEER STORY

(Journal Special Service.) MANITOWOC, Wis., July 11.—Rev. J. Reinhart, a retired clergyman of this city, has made preparations for his death and burial, which he prophesies will take place this month. Early in the spring he supervised the digging of his grave at Evergreen Cemetery, making it exactly six feet deep, laying a bottom of cement and constructing brick walls therein. Last month he visited the cemetery and, securing a flat sandstone, inscribed on it the following in German script: "Rev. J. Reinhart, born May 6, 1833. Died —, 1902." After he had finished this he said that everything now being complete he would go home to die. He has been confined to his bed since, and his death is but a matter of a short time.

EDWORTH LEAGUERS All Indianapolis Is Filled With the Workers.

INDIANAPOLIS, July 11.—Delegates to the biennial convention of the Indiana Edworth League were up with the lark this morning and spent a busy forenoon listening to reports which showed the flourishing condition of the organization and to addresses by eminent divines and others who pointed out the grand results attained in the past and the necessity for greater activity in the future. The auditorium of Roberts Park Church, spacious though it is, could scarcely accommodate the immense throng assembled when the gathering was called to order at 9 o'clock. After a preliminary service of music and prayer the gathering listened to a number of stirring addresses dealing with the league work. The speakers included the Rev. Horace M. Ogden, president of the Northwest Indiana conference league; H. H. Dean, president of the North Indiana conference league; Chancellor W. H. Hickman of De Pauw University and Dr. L. W. Munnah, of Philadelphia. After luncheon the convention divided into conferences for the consideration of various departments of league work. Among the interesting sessions, all of which were well attended, were those of the literary department, Mercy and Help department, Junior department and Spiritual department. This evening the delegates reassembled in open meeting to listen to a lecture by Bishop E. B. Hoos of the Methodist Church South.

TALKED BAD TO THE GIRLS

Clarence Foster's Story Recalled by the Disbrow Case.

(Journal Special Service.) SOUTHAMPTON, L. I., July 11.—The Disbrow case recalls to many of the villagers here an episode a few months ago in which Clarence Foster, who went to his death with Sarah Lawrence, was the principal actor and which almost caused an open scandal. The occasion was a masquerade ball given by the villagers of Southampton before the summer population had arrived, and attended by many of the best people in town. A number of persons from Good Ground came over for the occasion, among them a dashing young woman who made herself agreeable, talked scandal, paid visits to the dressing-room used by the women and spoke of things which are not talked about among women when men are present. Before the night was out this dashing young person had been ejected from the ball. The matter was hushed up, but there were many women in Southampton who did not care to meet Clarence Foster after that night, lest their faces might call to his mind things said by them in the presence of the dashing young woman from Good Ground.

CHAUTAUQUA

Watterson Speaks "Money and Morals."

At the Chautauqua this morning the usual time between 8 and 11 o'clock was devoted to classes, after which Rev. Alexander Blackburn, of the White Temple, Portland, spoke on "The Safeguards of the Home." Dr. Blackburn, who is a close observer and an interesting speaker, drew his characteristics into his lecture, which was enjoyed by all. A warm discussion followed the lecture, which was joined in by many ministers and W. C. T. U. workers. This afternoon H. W. Scott, editor of The Oregonian, will introduce Hon. Henry Watterson, who will speak on "Lincoln." This is the drawing card for today. There will be another baseball game this afternoon. In the evening there will be a reading by Professor S. S. Hamill and a lecture on "Fads," by Dr. Alexander Blackburn. A feature of tomorrow's program will be a lecture by Professor Thomas Strong on "Compulsory Education." The feature of the Chautauqua last evening was the lecture on "Money and Morals," by the eloquent Kentucky editor and possible Presidential candidate, Henry Watterson. Mr. Watterson was introduced by President W. C. Hawley, of Salem. Mr. Watterson commenced by explaining the name of his address. He then discussed the destiny of this country, stating that the one menace to this country is Canada, British Columbia and Mexico, because of the great number of people who have gone there with money to which they had no legal right. He then made comparisons between the rich man and the poor man, giving the reasons for the many misappropriations of money in this country, quoting from the experiences of many. He then asked what happiness is, saying that "happiness comes from the heart—not from the stomach." He made vivid comparisons between real and affected happiness. He concluded his address by saying that our real danger is moral danger, and denouncing the party devil and the money devil. Yesterday afternoon Professor John Ivey delivered an excellent lecture on "Paintings and Painters," which could only be heard to be appreciated. In the game between Multnomah and Mount Angel baseball teams, the former was victor by a score of 10 to 8.
