should get behind the custom mill proposition, as it means much to southern Oregon.

The largest nugget for the season thus far was thrust into the writer's hand yesterday. (In passing, want to announce my eyes feel much better but oh boy! how my feet itch.) It weighed approximately 15 ounces and as big over as the palm of a medium-sized hand, over one-half inch thick and pure gold. The possessor promised to have it at the jubilee exhibit in Medford June 3 to 9.

The Mine Scout Says:

Of great national importance to the silver mining interests and, no doubt, of considerable importance to the rehabilitation and recovery program is the announcement that President Roosevelt and the "silver bloc" leaders agree on a plan of proposed legislation to make silver of more importance in our national commerce and trade. Constructive measures will be forthcoming when people agree upon doing things the right way.

Wingdaming of the Rogue is underway preparatory to low water operations this summer. Old-timers predict the lowest water ever known, which portends successful sniping operations on the larger streams.

The cement gravel workings are attracting much attention this summer, due to several recent strikes of pay dirt in different sections of southern Oregon. Most important among them being the old channel of Canyon creek, where the most crude manner of operations is producing lavish returns.

The Bertha mine is being sampled and old workings cleaned out preparatory to more extensive operations.

Leasers and owners of mines are finding out the advantages of a custom mill. The Jacksonville mill is now treating ores from several properties which enables the continuation of mining which otherwise would be left undone. Miners
