J'ville Is Flattered

One of the most outstanding traits of Jacksonville has been its proclivity for making, and keeping, friends. The old town, dozing languidly under her canopy of shade trees and nestling comfortably where mountains and valley meet, last week was the recipient of a gift from a family whose name has been closely entwined in all her history and growth.

Last Friday Ben B. Beekman, son of the famous banker-footracer, C. C. Beekman, delivered to Jacksonville School District No. 1 a quitclaim deed to nearly four acres of desirable property used as athletic and recreational center as his most recent gift to the physical well-being and health of the community. The block of ground, always at the disposal of local school children and citizens, was deeded, without cost to the school district, by Beekman in memory of his father, who served as school board member here at various times during his useful and interesting life.

Jacksonville's citizens should appreciate this latest expression of traditional Beekman loyalty for their city. The gift should stir their civic interest and pride in the old town that has produced riches in gold and treasures in friends.

Vegetables to California

Although it may seem like carrying coal to Newcastle, the Eugene Fruit-growers association is shipping a carload of canned vegetables to California markets every other day. High quality of Oregon irrigated vegetables places them in demand with the most particular of purchasers, who tire of the woody, water food products of the great California commercial farms.

The Rogue river valley also has irrigated fertile land that produces some of the most excellent of vegetables. A friend of this country has made a study of the quality grocery stores in suburban Oakland, and reports that they would take many truckloads of fine produce from southern Oregon.

Farmers of this county would do well to consider the possibilities of the California market. Needless to say, Californians have overlooked nothing in the Oregon market. This state is a convenient dumping ground for their surplus stuff. The best produce market naturally is the populous and comparatively wealthy sections of California, and we of southern Oregon should be especially interested in the bay district, which is easily available as an export market.

Just how this marketing could be carried out requires some study, but it seems some sort of farm cooperative would be the thing. The Eugene Fruit-growers, because of their corporate organization, recently obtained a loan of many thousands of dollars for marketing purposes from the Spokane bank for cooperatives, a new addition to the farm credit administration.

Establishment of an organization here, with the building of an expensive cannery and other necessary steps, would of course be facilitated by lower freight rates, which may come about within a few years through the possible building of a railroad to the coast.—Grants Pass Bulletin.

The Mine Scout Says:

It is with much interest we note the addition of another shift at the Pacific States mill. This speaks for itself, both for the management and the mine. The Opp mine operations are of primary importance to the industry in southern Oregon. The continuation of the ore with depth and quantity in the mine, together with good values, bears out the writer's contention that values do go down in some of the mines north of the California line. Legal subdivisions never determine ore deposits.

Right in line comes two shifts working at the custom mill of the Jacksonville Gold Mining company at Jacksonville. Quartz mining is increasing fast and there is room for much more. Custom mills and leasing made many a good mining camp and, with the advance in price of gold, southwestern Oregon is in the making.

Graham and Summers, et als, have completed their ore chute down the mountainside where the ore is now easily transported to the two-stamp mill. This property is known as the Scott mine and is situated on the south side of Humbug creek. It promises to continue production for many years.

Highgrade ore is now being mined in the Barron mine and shipment of another car will be made soon. This is one of the few silver and gold mines in the state of Oregon.

Recent figures, carefully compiled, give an approximate production of gold for 1933 from Jackson county of $365,000. This is considerably more than produced in 1932. Due to the advance in price of gold, 1934 probably will reach near one-half millions dollars, and with quartz mills increasing their output, may reach even more, despite extremely low water levels prevailing.

Silver has started its advance. Purchase of silver now is under way by the government. Considerable buying is being made from foreign countries. The embargo on exports took the wind out of the sails of silver speculators. Looks like our old Uncle Sam is getting wised up and means to give the producer and consumer a break instead of letting the middleman get the cream.

First Showing Special Jubilee Films Central Point Grange Friday

hall Friday evening, July 20, at 8 o'clock. These are pictures taken by H. D. Kem of Medford and were made to obtain a historical record of the celebration of Oregon's 75 years of statehood. Members of the jubilee committee who have previewed the films are enthusiastic in their praise of the excellent photography and treatment of a difficult subject. The true pioneer spirit back of the celebration has been captured by the camera and a complete story is told in a most entertaining manner.

Mr. Kem is head of the advertising department of The California Oregon Power company and his professional training as an artist is evident throughout the entire picture. Beginning with the first announcement in the daily paper that the celebration of Oregon's 75th anniversary would be held in Jackson county, the smooth flowing story proceeds to show: the spreading of the news of the forthcoming celebration . . . the hurry and bustle of preparation in advance of the crowds . . . the arrival of visitors including the special trains of the Shriners and the 17 airships from southern California (showing their flight over the Siskiyou from the air) . . . intimate views of United States Secretary of Agriculture Wallace's visit to honor Oregon pioneers . . . night scenes of the coronation of the daughter of Oregon's first governor as queen . . . the rodeo, with closeups of its thrills and spills . . . the crowds that filled the streets . . . the preparation and assembling of the multitude, in pioneer costumes, that participated in the parades (many of them real pioneers) . . . the magnificent spectacle of the parade . . . and the fashion show of the historical wedding gowns that were worn when Oregon was born . . . are some of the highlights of the film.

Some of the scenes photographed are the only records in existence of these historical events. Mr. Kem was persuaded to go to considerable personal effort and expense to obtain these pictures because of the historical importance of the celebration.

W. B. Roberts of Medford will supervise the musical accompaniment and sound part of the program. In addition to the three reels of diamond jubilee pictures a two-reel amateur comedy will also be shown. Miss Harriet Sparrow, of Central Point, is in charge of the program and is receiving congratulations upon the success of her efforts to secure the first public showing of this picture. The program is open to the public.

Home Repair Loans May Be Secured As Well As Mortgages

The United States government is now making home repairs and remodeling loans, in addition to the loans made home owners for refinancing their mortgages. Many people are under the impression that if they already have a home owners' loan they cannot borrow money from the government to fix up or remodel the interior and exterior of their homes. This is not the case, as those who have already borrowed from the Home Owners' Loan corporation are entitled to the reconditioning same as those who are now making application to have their mortgages taken over by the corporation. Again, those who own their homes clear of mortgage but who are unable to obtain reconditioning loans from private lending agencies are entitled to the benefits of this department.

Three distinct operations have been earmarked by the government. Repair and maintenance is first, including all work designated to restore a house to its condition when new, such as painting, pointing of masonry, calking of doors and window frames, roofing, replacement of gutters, down-spouts, floors, plumbing, etc.

Remodeling is next in order, involving structural changes, such as enlargement, addition of a bathroom, a porch, window, rearrangement of rooms, or any other alteration in the design.

Modernizing, the third operation, involves installation of new equipment, such as insulation, heating plant, electric system or running water.

Those who wish to repair or make their homes more livable and attractive should make immediate application to their district Home Owners' Loan corporation office.

"Then there's the chap who could drink enough beer to bloat a battleship."—Jacksonville Miner. And does; and who'll still be lying in Thomaston, Georgia, until he's lying still.—Weston Leader.

Married life should hold no disillusion for the nudists united in Chicago. They concealed nothing from each other.—Weston Leader. We aren't saying that Olin Miller is "safe and sane." But unless we go to Georgia or he comes to Oregon, he's probably safe.—Weston Leader.
