Fear and Trembling? Phooey!

Now that election is over and another democratic landslide in history, the becklers and cold-water throwers will start worrying about the "lack of balance" in the national administration, and continue with their forecasts of terrible consequences from the Deal Deal.

The balloting showed, however, that voters as a whole held little brief for the administration's critics, and that we Americans intend to continue backing up our president, even if every detail of his program has not worked out perfectly. It is pretty hard for most of us to see great danger ahead because the reactionaries were boosted.

Mr. Roosevelt now knows for certain that his people are still with him; that they are not fickle and too easily swayed. And the politician "viewing with alarm" the overwhelming endorsement of the administration will show a lack of confidence in the nation, and a bigoted, self-expanding perspective.

The people had their choice on election day and they overwhelmingly expressed it in terms of democracy. The viewers with alarmers and the anti-administrationists who see something in that to worry about are simply sour-grapes and self-seekers.

American voters, taken a whole, are not foundlings. They can take care of themselves pretty much without the repressing hand of their self-appointed guardians. Rather, we need a few more viewers with couragers—and alarm turn-offers.

The Overrated Pioneer

Southern Oregon is wont to pay tribute, at every opportunity, to her pioneers who crossed the plains in ox carts, who hewed themselves homes in the strange west and who fought Indians with one hand while they performed hard labor with the other.

The hardy, callous handed frontiersmen and their husky wives are touted as salt of the earth, handing down a strong and wholesome heritage to following generations. The pioneer was an empire-builder, a trail blazer.

But, alas, think of the poor present-day man and woman who is completely snubbed and unappreciated. No history books extoll their bravery or soul-cracking effort. No societies are formed to do them honor. Mr. and Mrs. 1934 do not receive bronze plaques and stone memorials to their indomitable courage. No sir. The man and woman of today is completely overlooked in our tributes and offerings; the pioneer is getting all the attention!

Why this should be so is hard to see. What did the pioneer know about that man-killing privation of doing without a new model car? How was grandpap and grandmom, busy with their chores and scalp-saving, to taste the bitterness of having to wear last winter's coat? Pioneers may have had their trials and tribulations, but never did they turn on a radio and have the darned thing squeek in their face or, worse, have a crooner mumble things into their homes.

The man and woman of today need the constitution of a steam engine, the prowess of an Indian warrior and the courage of the pioneer who started west with a broken-down wagon, a sack of corn meal and a spavined horse, to weather their hardships today, and to keep pushing ahead—ever and forever ahead—into new frontiers, like contract bridge, how to raise the hood on a new auto or how to appreciate a new tooth-paste.

Privation? Pioneers hardly understood the word. On every hand today we have herds of humanity suffering from having to get along with last year's models. The bonneted lady of yore never suffered the humility of having to get along with ice while her neighbor in the next log cabin swung a frigidaire door. Nor did the females of an earlier time have to stop in the middle of childbirth to spit on a runner in their stocking.

There were no instalment collectors, no Fuller brush men, no cooking schools or electric companies to heckle the pioneer. A thin-skinned finance company is worse any day than a red-skinned band of roving braves, and the unappreciated present-day man and woman suffer, unheralded, as we pay homage to pioneers.

But of such stern stuff is life made. Today we sit and stare at outmoded radios, cars, kitchen sinks and fountain in a wilderness of new and better models while the world ignores our courage to carry on in spite of our hardships, and turns the spotlight on early-day settlers. It isn't right, and you can add that to the long list of privations the darned pioneers escaped.

TYPING AWARDS GIVEN

Chills chase up and down the backs of the students in the Typing II class when Miss Velma Charlton, the instructor, hands out a small pamphlet and gets out her "tick-tock."

This is because this class is trying for awards by writing 15 minute speed tests.

Pins and certificates of all kinds are being awarded to those who write a certain number of words per minute with less than five errors. The most valuable and the hardest to win is a gold pin, which is given for writing 60 words per minute for 15 minutes.

Those who have received certificates are Lloyd Whitney, Wayne Combest, Vyron Bostwick and Elizabeth White.

We've an idea that Olin Miller wrote this one in the Thomaston calaboose: "If you can't carry your point by moving heaven and earth, try raising hell."—Weston Leader.

Eyestrain is a very real danger. Few of us realize that we pay dearly for every hour we strain our eyes. The tragedy is that we seldom know that we ARE misusing our eyes. Attempting to read, work or study in poor or glaring light is the cause of most eyestrain. Often the penalty for eyestrain is not paid until later years. Then it is too late. The two or three pennies a day saved on your light bill isn't worth the risk of impaired vision.
