

Shafer Receives Word of Patent Granting on Trailer Hitch Device

Jake Shafer, rancher of Jacksonville, a few days ago received word from Washington, D. C., of the granting of patents on a trailer hitch device which he worked out in his own barnyard machine shop. Shafer is considering several marketing opportunities for the hitch, which will be an innovation in devices of that kind.

Shafer's trailer hitch embodies a swivel principle which allows universal movement of a trailer connection, eliminating all possibilities of binding or transfer of road twist either to or from car and trailer. The hitch, of which he has a working model, also is cushioned for end thrust and will permit free, non-binding backing of the trailer as well. Shafer believes the trailer hitch can be manufactured and sold for about $5 each, and negotiations already are underway with a Medford manufacturing concern for exploiting of patent rights.

Pacific States Story

for Oregon, production here has followed a similar trend.

Should present indications of deep production at Pacific States be borne out by continued development at depth, quartz gold production in the Jacksonville section will be definitely launched on the solid, long-time foundation of other proven districts to the south. For this reason Pacific States' exploration of ore chutes is being watched with interest as it may have significant bearing on the Jacksonville district's future from a mineral standpoint.

And, so far, exploration of depth at Pacific States has been a repetition of the history of California's deep producers.

CAUSE for Thanksgiving

By J. C. REYNOLDS

Just for example,
Let me give you a sample
Of the new kind of verse—
(Some as bad as this and some much worse),
That lady rhymsters lately without due excuse,
Are striving to introduce.
I really do not admire these new-fangled poetical stunts,
But am willing to try almost anything once.
And so to avoid any needless delay,
I'll spring this mess of doggerel on Thanksgiving Day.
We're thankful we still have our feet on the ground—
And that turkeys are selling for two dimes a pound.
It fills us with bubbles of joy and delight,
To know Election turned out all right.
We're thankful we haven't been kidnaped or shot,
Or put on the spot.
It appears we have bested Depression's rude pranks—
And for that we give thanks.
We are happy to know Prohibitions been sunk
With all of its bunk;
And that the mighty Wall street financial kings
Are framing up a new war and other interesting things;
Which will furnish a splendid chance for our ambitions sons
To try out the latest models in battleships and guns.
There are many other blessings for which, to be right frank,
We are glad to render at least one enthusiastic thank.
But I'll be doubly thankful at this Thanksgiving time
If someone doesn't shoot me after reading this rhyme.

SPARE TIME CAN BE MADE USEFUL

It is surprising what can be accomplished by the wise use of spare time. Many of the world's most famous characters attribute their success mainly to the utilization of spare time.

For instance, Benjamin Franklin was a miser of time and hoarded every second. To him the loss of a single minute was a loss as extravagant as that of a dollar.

To the majority, freedom of time affords a golden opportunity for enjoyment and amusement. So,
