Chamber Commerce To Be Very Active During Fall Season

At a meeting held Monday noon by the board of directors of the Ashland chamber of commerce, Charles W. Fortmiller of Fortmiller's department store was chosen as president of the boost organization to succeed Dr. Bernard G. Barkwill, who handed in his resignation at the same meeting.

Dr. Barkwill is leaving for the east soon for further medical studies. The term of Mr. Fortmiller will expire next March. At the next meeting of the directors, September 30, another member for that body will be named by the board to fill Dr. Barker's place as a director.

In a bulletin statement issued to the membership of the organization Tuesday, Mr. Fortmiller said:

"It is my sincere hope that the members of this organization will prove to be as helpful to me as they were to my predecessor, and as your president, I will welcome any suggestions that you can make to me or to any other member of the board.

"At our next regular meeting we will select some one of our members to serve on the board of directors until the next general election. We will all appreciate any help you can give us regarding this selection.

"The chamber of commerce is now ready to open the fall season after a summer devoted mainly to tourst promotion work. We will have a number of announcements to be made in the coming weeks concerning our activities, some of which we believe will prove to be of interest to all our members.

"The success of any chamber of commerce depends primarily upon the interest and activity of its members. We trust that you will do your share and help your organization, and investigate before condemning."

PASTOR RESIGNS

Rev. R. T. Holmes has announced his resignation as pastor of the Nazarene church here and will be pastor at Oregon City. His resignation was accepted with great regret by the local church. The resignation becomes effective October 15.

It Would Free Bear Creek From Pollution

Bear Creek, which once rippled merrily along amid scenes of verdure and cleanliness, may again see such good old times restored if efforts of valley towns and cities to secure sewage disposal plants are successful.

One such plant is now under construction at Medford. Other cities and towns that have filed applications with the PWA for disposal plants are Ashland, Talent, and Central Point. The PWA offers to pay 45 per cent of the cost, and loan the balance at small rate of interest and on long time. Steps are also expected to be taken for a plant at Phoenix.

The change to modern methods of sewage disposal from methods which seem almost medieval would appear to be desirable. It would cost some money of course, but not nearly so much if the change were found to be an absolute necessity after the PWA had ceased to function.

NO TAXES, NO DEBTS

Shaniko, little Wasco county town which had 100 residents when the 1930 census was taken, is the envy of the entire state.

The city has no taxes, no debts, and is on a cash basis, F. P. Wagner, city recorder, wrote Secretary of State Snell. Shaniko has never had a budget and doesn't see why it should have to draw one up now to submit to Snell in view of a law passed by the last legislature providing for auditing of municipal accounts.

PIONEER PASSES

William (Bill) Hanley, known as the "Sage of Harney County," and well known in Southern Oregon, died Sunday morning in Pendleton after attending the Pendleton roundup where Saturday was set aside as "Bill Hanley Day."

He was related to the Hanleys of Jackson county, and was the cattle baron of Eastern Oregon. He was prominent in public life of Oregon, and took an active interest in Oregon's affairs until the day of his death.

One brother, Mike Hanley, died about a year ago, having lived in Jackson county most of his life.
