Emeralds Are Not Easily

Imitated, Writer Asserts
Emeralds, one is told at the Gemological Institute, have always been more easily imitated than diamonds and rubies. However, states an authority in the Los Angeles Times, no student of gemology has need to worry about being deceived as to the value of an emerald. Tests of hardness, dichroism, refractive index, and the nature of inclusions easily reveal the counterfeit.

There are some inferior imitations of most gems which can be detected by homely tests. Glass feels much warmer to the tongue or cheek than a diamond. Glass, bakelite, and galinith imitations can be scratched with a steel file, whereas the real stones cannot be. The reconstructed stones which were once made by fusing many small pieces of the genuine stone together are no longer manufactured, therefore they are more valuable than the usual synthetic stones. But they do not have the value of one large stone.

Doublets, triplets and foil backs are another variety of the gem counterfeiter's wares. Doublets and triplets are manufactured by assembling various portions of genuine stones and imitation stones, in an attempt to represent the genuine. If any of these are immersed in water and then held to a strong light, the seams will be readily noticed. Foilbacks consist of a portion of the genuine article backed by glass or another imitation.

It seems that simple tests are not always infallible, however, and that in some instances the detection of a synthetic stone depends on finding tiny bubbles which cannot be seen without a microscope or great magnification.

The Trumpet

The ancient Hebrews used as the first wind instruments the horns of animals, a straight horn being preferred to a curved thorn. This was known as the shophar keren and was used to summon the people to war, to the hearing of the law, to announce the year of jubilee, the approach of the ark, to hail a new king, and for other public uses. In Numbers 10:2 Moses was commanded by God to cause to be made two silver trumpets to call the people to worship. These are also spoken of in the Book of Revelation.

Dickens Not Afraid

One hundred years ago there was no system to copyright English literature in this country and books printed in England were immediately reprinted here without payment to the author. The best Americans were disgusted, but no one dared say anything about it. Not so Charles Dickens, though, for when he came here he made a bitter attack on Americans for this and was awarded by anonymous threats, compared with a murderer, and threatened with tar and feathers.

Novel Novelist

Sterne, the famous novelist and humorist of the Eighteenth century, resorted to some fantastic tricks in his first work, "Tristram Shandy." At one place, after the death of some one, there was an entire black page in sign of mourning. Stars were profusely used sometimes for half a page, to convey the impression that something very emotional was left out. One chapter made to comprise two pages was left blank!

It's Not Too Cold In Dallas!

It may be snowing in the East, freezing in the Midwest and a blizzard may be coming out of the Northwest, but in Dallas, where the Texas Centennial Exposition will be held next year from June to December it wasn't too cold for Mary Ellen Logan to try the waters of White Rock Lake. With her is Carolyn Durham, chief of the Exposition's Itangerettes, a corps of 50 hostesses.

Speedboat, sailboat and outdoor motor races will be held on White Rock, just outside of Dallas, next July and August as part of the Exposition's elaborate sports program.

HILT

The first meeting this year of the Hilt Community club was held at the club rooms Thursday afternoon. Club officers were elected as follows: Mrs. H. Hjertager, president; Mrs. B. Gilberg, first vice-president; Mrs. R. Elliott, 2nd vice-president; Mrs. Scheuler, secretary, and Mrs. F. Ohlund, treasurer. Directors are Mrs. Baumgartner, Mrs. DeWitt, Mrs. E. Tjertager, Mrs. Nelson, Mrs. Bayliss and Mrs. Walland. There were eighteen ladies present. Bridge was played, with Mrs. Madge Nebeker taking first prize and Mrs. Scheuler taking second.

The regular meeting of the P.T.A. was held at the schoolhouse Friday afternoon at three, with 13 present in spite of the disagreeable weather. They were entertained by a selection played by the Rhythm band and a song by the third and fourth grade children. Articles were read by Mrs. Andersen and Mrs. E. Vail. A social hour was enjoyed after adjournment. Irene Andersen, accompanied by her mother on the piano, sang "Animal Crackers in My Soup" and "In Grownup Land." Mrs. Mendes was hostess.

Among the Saturday visitors to Yreka were: Mr. and Mrs. Frank Ward and daughter Babe, Mr. Van De Wighe and son Joseph, Mr. Baumgartner, Mr. Tony Fennis, Mr. and Mrs. Hess and daughter Nina May, Mr. and Mrs. George Vierria, Mr. and Mrs. D. Jarnett, Mr. and Mrs. W. Gran and son Billy and Mr. Pete Favero.

Miss Edna Pearson of Portland arrived Saturday morning and is visiting Mrs. Bayliss.

Mrs. J. Clark, who has been ill for some time, had her ear lanced a few days ago and is now improving rapidly.

Mr. Fred Bayliss left Saturday evening for Ogden, Utah, where he is showing some of his Hereford cattle at the stock show.

Mrs. Clark Becker left Sunday evening for Los Angeles, where she will attend meetings of the P.T.A.

Mrs. W. Roush received word that her sister had passed away recently in the East.

Mrs. Dunaway was in Yreka Wednesday.

A card party was held by the 4-L members at the clubhouse on Tuesday evening. There were eight tables—six of bridge and two of pinochle. Prizes for the men went to E. Adams, high and R. Nebeker, low; and for the ladies, Miss Thelma Wise, high and Mrs. Harris low.

Miss Betty Dunaway had a birthday party Tuesday afternoon. She is seven years old.

Mr. and Mrs. Guy Wilcox and Roy Wilcox were here Tuesday from Grants Pass for a visit at the home of Mr. and Mrs. J. L. Wilcox.
