Of Interest To The Ladies Says Perry Ashcraft

As a recognition of the importance woman has assumed in economic affairs, the Packard Motor Car Company, throughout the country, is celebrating this week as "Ladies' Week." Special receptions for women are being held in practically every Packard sales place in the United States.

"Everyone who sells motor cars knows the financial power of women," explained Perry L. Ashcraft. "We are dedicating this week to the ladies in recognition of the high place they hold today in all business and trade. Woman's ownership of property, securities and money in America has carried her to a new high level in national economic importance."

In Medford Packard has arranged for a week of special activities of particular interest to women. Sales rooms have been especially decorated for the occasion and invitations have been sent to women's clubs and other organizations throughout the city.

It is expected that during the week men will continue visiting Packard show rooms, inspecting the new cars and trying them out on the highways and without a doubt, according to Mr. Ashcraft, the occasion will be seized upon for family inspection of cars and demonstrations. For those women who attend the special reception alone and span demonstrating cars have been reserved.

"During the last three years," Perry Ashcraft said, "automobiles

YOU SAW IT IN THE MINER
have been more improved than in the previous 10 years. Much of this improvement is of direct interest to the women. Cars are more easily handled and controlled. There have been many important safety developments. Certainly they are more beautiful, more luxurious and more comfortable. We are proud of what the Packard engineers have accomplished in all these important respects. We are certain engineering results as shown by today's cars are going to prove of great interest to every woman."

THE LAST OF HIS KIND—THE OLD BLACKSMITH

By H. L. Moore

Fifty odd years have come and gone,
His anvil would ring from early dawn
Till the shadows crept out upon the lawn—
Another day's work o'er the forge he had done.

I can see him now as I saw him then;
Scarce more than a boy he seemed to be;
So gay and care free, light hearted was he;
A jolly good fellow and sport was he then.

A tall silk hat and a bright red cravat,
So blythe and handsome and all that.
When the night came down and his labors were done
He could dance all night till the rest were all gone.

But the next day through the smoke and the grime,
Who would know this nigh stepping dandy so fine?
Some rancher with his wild horse to shoe
Would come down to see what this lad could do.

They came not too big and they came not too bad—
For so kind and so gentle, and what patience he had.
His fame as a smith spread far over the land;
What'er could be done he could do with his hand.

Times have changed since then, we scarce need him now;
His hair is all white, and wrinkled his brow;
His back is still straight, but his hands are all bent;
To help out his neighbors, his life has been lent.

I can see him now as I saw him then—
We would go for miles down to his den,
Just to watch him some outlaw to shoe,
A real bad one that no other could do.

And now I would say to all those who care,
Please remember this man has been fair.
His life's work is ended, so let's take a look—
His accounts are all settled and closed is his book.
