

On Oregon Farms

High and Low Herds Compared
McMinnville—The advantage of building up a herd of high producing cows is well illustrated by the last annual report of the Yamhill-Washington dairy herd improvement association. The average production of the two high herds in this association was 474 pounds of fat, and the returns above feed cost were $116.79 per cow, as compared with an average production of 239 pounds of fat and returns per cow above feed costs of $52.27 for the two low producing herds. The total feed costs per cow for the high herds was $69.50 per cow and $57.77 for the low herds.

ASHLAND—The first crate of strawberries from their big patch was brought to market last Saturday by Bill and Ralph Thompson, and one of the boxes required only 18 berries for the necessary 12 ounces. The berries were in the market a week earlier than the first ones marketed a year ago.

Erosion Control Value Seen
Corvallis—Two-fold advantages from soil erosion prevention practices are to be noted in the Eddy peach orchard near Monroe in Benton county, reports O. T. McWhorter, O.S.C. extension horticulturist. Mr. Eddy last fall covered his entire hill-land orchard with straw. The straw had some grain, which grew up through the covering. When observed recently this orchard showed no erosion at all, and in addition there was some cover crop to work down along with the straw. The addition of this humus-forming material will place the orchard in a more favorable condition to grow a better cover crop and will lessen the tendency to erosion in the future, McWhorter points out.

Canyon City—Farmers of the John Day valley are watching with considerable interest the results of the seeding of approximately 90 acres of crested wheat grass on sage brush land on the Oliver Brothers' ranch, reports R. E. Brooks, county agriculture agent. The seed was drilled in on land that had sufficient top soil to insure moisture and a stand, he says. Several acres were also seeded in this manner by John Silvers below John Day.

Radio Club Will Give Party May 25

The Ashland Radio Club will give a card party at the Pioneer hall next Monday night, May 25, to which the public is cordially invited. There will be auction, contract bridge and pinochle, a prize being given for the winner of each game.

There will be a total charge of 25c which will be the total charge for the games and refreshments. The proceeds will be used to put on the annual hamfest to be held on the summit of the Siskiyou the seventh of June.

Many Visit New Ice & Storage CO.

The popular place in Ashland last Saturday was the new $15,000 Ice and Cold Storage plant, which was open to the public for inspection from 8 a. m. to 10 p. m.

Every courtesy was shown the visitors, members of the firm explaining the storage operations and facilities of the plant and details of the entire system. Thirteen hundred ice cream cones were given out to visitors and other favors were shown.

The building in itself is attractive, as well as housing an important industry. The individual cold storage lockers constitute a convenient feature, as they supply to families or individuals the opportunity to store prepared fruits and vegetables, or meats, for use later on.

G. S. Butler is president of the company, John R. Tomlin vice-president, Lyle B. Thurman, secretary and auditor, and Major Morris manager. These with Earl Shepherd, compose the directorate.

Texas Beauty

This is Georgia Carroll, 17-year-old Dallas high school girl, who won second place in the contest to select the Texas Centennial Exposition's "Bluebonnet Girl." She will have an important part in the June 6 ceremonies, when President Roosevelt visits Dallas to open the big World's Fair.

TOWNSEND TOPICS

Two hundred dollars per month pension — WHY?

It has been shown by statistics that the spending of $2000 to $2500 annually in commercial production is required to make possible the permanent employment of one worker. Hence, we say, retire the elders on a $200 per month pension. $2400 annually. This money will provide jobs for as many people as there are elders on the retired pension rolls.

Second there is a necessity of stimulating and increasing business to create additional jobs. A man on a government dole does not stimulate business. He is a load on the government and no benefit to business, because he has no buying power.

A man with a normal income of $2400. per year has buying power beyond ability to buy beans and bread. He buys clothing, a home, modern home appliances, an automobile, insurance, etc. People on a dole cannot buy these things.

The Townsend plan is not simply a pension proposal, as many people think. It is not a dole system. It is a national recovery program. It is a program to increase buying power and a demand and market for the products of all industry in America.

The industrialists say: "Give us a market and we will supply every human need that can be expressed. This market cannot be created by a dole system of $15, $30, or even $50. per month. But this market can be created by retiring our elders on a normal income of $200. per month. Then when this market has been created to supply all human needs, every able bodied man and woman will find employment, and having employment and prosperity, they will be able to pay their share of the taxes to support the Townsend plan and their government. Let's employ everybody and collect taxes from everybody and give everybody an opportunity to support themselves and develop a greater America.
