ASHLAND INDUSTRIES

The formal opening last Saturday of the new plant of the Ashland Ice and Storage company marks another step in the forward move of this city and community in the matter of industries. It has the most modern equipment that could be obtained and its business is bound to expand.

The Bagley canning company is planning a much greater output this coming season. It expects to pack 100,000 cases of tomatoes, which is four times the 1932 pack.

The Moon lumber mill is another local industry that will add greatly to employment. And there are many smaller industries in the city and community.

Dairying, farming, gardening, while usually not classed as industries, furnish much employment. This is a rich region, a growing region, an attractive region, and many tourists linger here extra time on account of lovely Lithia Park and other scenic attractions.

"PSYCHOLOGICAL"

The newspapers and magazines of 1931, when the Hoover administration was in full flower, told about "business stagnation, financial depression and economic disturbances."

The Old Dealers of that time said such conditions were merely "psychological." If that was the case it might be plausible to say that the fuss and fuming and fury about "dictatorship" now being directed against the new deal by those same Old Dealers are also "psychological." In other words it is merely in their minds, and their minds are badly warped.

SOUNDS LIKE GOOD SENSE

"Quit pestering the kiddies about their diet", is the substance of a statement made by Dr. Clifford Sweet of Oakland, California. Give them the full choice of food at the family table is his advice. And when there are guests, treat the kiddies as guests. Don't make them eat what they don't like. As to the particular importance of spinach and carrots, he says one vegetable is as good as another. Somehow or other Dr. Sweet's advice seems like good horse sense.

SMALL PEBBLES

All the census sharps will tell you,
 As their figures dance a jig,
 That the population of the world
 Is very, very big.
 People dwell upon the continents,
 And throng the hemispheres;
 There are twenty hundred million folks
 On this old globe of cheers.

If you ever get a grizzly grouch,
 And feel the least inclined
 To go out and jaw your neighbors
 Just to ease your pent-up mind,
 You should stop and think it over;
 You should scan the census page;
 You should see how rash and senseless
 Is your wild and windy rage.

There are lots of other people
 On the big and busy earth,
 And they each bear a burden;
 And their life is not all mirth;
 They must learn the bitter lesson,
 They must struggle as they go;
 If they climb without a murmur,
 Why should you indulge in woe?

You are not the only pilgrim
 That must walk a lonely road,
 You are not the only mortal
 That must bend beneath a load;
 For with all your selfish notions proud,
 The census figures teach
 That you're just a little pebble
 On a mighty big old beach.
