ASHLAND GRANITE

Ashland Chamber of Commerce is inaugurating a campaign for the use of Ashland granite in the construction of the new State capitol. This is a gratifying move and now that it has finally been launched, should be a hot one and receive the hearty cooperation and support of all local citizens and organizations, as well as that of the boost bodies of the entire state.

Plans for an intensive campaign were discussed Wednesday at a meeting in Medford. Gordon McCracken, secretary of the local chamber of commerce, and William Blair, manager of the Blair granite quarry here, A. H. Banwell of the Jackson county chamber of commerce and Robert Duff, chairman of the county chamber of commerce industrial committee, talked matters over and mapped out plans of action.

Chambers of commerce all over the state will be asked to join in the move to have native stone used in construction of the state capitol. State pride should demand the use of state material if such material is found to be available.

The Miner doesn't need to say that it is highly pleased with the move for an active state-wide campaign for the consideration of Ashland granite for use in the capitol project. This newspaper began urging such a move almost as soon as funds for the capitol were appropriated by the legislature. Miner comments and editorials were reprinted in many of the leading newspapers in the state.

In some quarters there was a persistent effort from the start to make it appear that Vermont marble was the only suitable stone for the work. Some of the stone-cutters wrote articles to the larger newspapers to that effect. The Miner insisted that Ashland granite should be considered, pointing not only to state pride but to the cost of freight charges for the Vermont granite.

OLD GLORY

This your day, Old Glory,
On the land and on the seas;
And our glad hearts thrill with pride of you
As your folds float out on the breeze.
This is the day of the Stars and Stripes,
Of the old Red, White and Blue,
The day of the banner of Truth and Right,
The day that we give to you.

Many a year, Old Glory,
Has drifted back and away
Since patriot hearts and patriot hands
Inspired the first Flag Day;
Since Betsy Ross with her needle deft,
And Washington true and brave,
First dreamed the dream of your starry folds
And bade you proudly wave.

But our hearts and our hands are as true today
As those of the days of old:
And our lives are yours with as free a gift
To your glorious heart of gold;
And ever we'll call you our Good Old Flag,
Though ever you're new and young
As on the day when your azure field
Was first to the world unflung.

This is your day, Old Glory,
The day that we lift our eyes
And see you, a symbol of power and peace,
In the infinite reach of the skies;
This your day, Old Glory,
To float world-free on the breeze;
And this is the pledge of your destiny bright—
That you're loved by hearts like these.
