GOOD PEAR YEAR

William A. Schoenfeld, dean of the school of agriculture, OSC, and Mrs. Schoenfeld were visitors in this county Monday. Dean Schoenfeld predicted that this will be the best season for Jackson county pear growers in ten years.

— YOU SAW IT IN THE MINER

Where Solomon Missed A Bet

In a lonely frame of mind the beautiful Black Widow spider reposed in the depths of the web she had ingeniously stretched beneath a large sheltering slab of pine bark. It was a great relief then to her pensive mood to see approaching, a well set-up male of her species whose rollicking gait betokened a lovesick swain on the prowl for female society. Stretching herself luxuriously she arose from her recumbent position and favored him with a most seductive smile.

Boldly he came forward and the firm touch of her tentacles was proof that it was a case of love at first sight for both. Invitingly she slid back into her boudoir, holding the passageway open for her visitor. Without hesitation he entered and possessing himself of a position by her side, began a furious courtship, to which she responded with fervor and which at length terminated in a close embrace of delirious ecstasy. Then having arrived at a mutual understanding, in the manner of hour-glass spiders the world over, they settled down contentedly to a season of honeymooning. Lavishly she bestowed caresses upon her fascinating companion and divided with him a sumptuous repast of blue-bottle fly that she had been holding in reserve in her cupboard.

But alas! the honeymoon finally grew tiresome, as all honeymoons eventually do and one morning she awoke to the realization that she was completely fed up on love-making and wished to be left alone for the pressing business of producing and rearing a family. Also her intuition assured her that the affection of her mate was rapidly cooling. So beckoning him to her side, she addressed him as follows, "Listen, you black, long-legged, no-good specimen of spiderland. You have served your purpose here and from long experience in watching the males of all species, I know exactly what you have in mind. You would like to desert me for some other charmer, regardless of the heart-break and jealousy I might suffer. And same as all other males you will in time become cranky and quarrelsome and will attempt to indulge your inborn propensity for combat by joining in with fellow-partisans in some unnecessary and uncalled-for war, a calamity always looked upon with horror by the female sex everywhere. So as a matter of self-protection and to do my part in keeping the world safe for democracy, I am about to perform a little trick which has been used to good advantage by my ancestors for countless generations", and with one deft gesture she sliced off his head.

Then almost before he had ceased to struggle, she began to devour him, nor did she quit till the last juicy bite had been consumed. That finished, she started to put her house in order for the expected increase in her family, meanwhile conversing with herself as is the custom of all B. W. spiders. "If Solomon", she reasoned, "had devoted more attention to the B. W. spider and less to the ant, he could have easily originated a sure receipt for lasting world peace that would work where all others have failed, by simply removing the source of all the trouble. If the female sex everywhere would promptly exterminate their mates as soon as their mission in life had been fulfilled and the honeymoon had begun to pall, the sole originators of armed conflict would be eliminated and they would be forever freed from the pangs of grief and jealousy caused by philandering males. To devour them, or not, should be a matter for each female to decide for herself, though this method has its advantages, as it saves funeral expenses and a certain amount of butcher bills. At any rate unless the real sources of hope of future peace will be in world discord are removed, all vain and I have done what I could she ceased soliloquizing and began to point the way".

After which comforting thought to lay her eggs.

Rev. and Mrs. C. E. Dunham and Miss Ruth Dunham are attending a two weeks' session of the Baptist assembly at Cascadia. Rev. Dunham has charge of the history classes at the assembly.

Mr. and Mrs. Edward Anderson of Talent have on display at the Jackson county chamber of commerce a lemon measuring 15 inches. It was grown on their premises from a seed planted ten years ago. Last year it yielded four lemons, this year eight. Each winter it is removed to a hot-house.
