

T-B MENACE FOURTH LESS

Thirty years ago a person's chances of dying of tuberculosis were four times as great as they are today, according to Mrs. E. W. St. Pierre, secretary of the Oregon Tuberculosis association.

"In 1906, 200 persons in the United States out of every 100,000 died of tuberculosis. Today not many more than 50 die of the disease and the rate in Oregon is even lower," she said.

"Thirty years ago the estimated number of living persons in the country suffering from tuberculosis was 1,500,000. Today they are less than half that number of sufferers from that disease in this country. "When it is realized that every victim of the disease is a potential spreader of tuberculosis to an average of three other persons, the chances of "catching" the disease today as compared with 30 years ago are very much slighter.

"This happy result has not been brought about by accident. Thirty years ago the first tuberculosis Christmas seal in the United States was sold in Wilmington, Del. That little holiday sticker and the millions which have followed it have made possible the formation of thousands of tuberculosis associations and these associations have established the fact that health can be bought.

"Tuberculosis is still one of the greatest of our health problems as it still takes an annual toll of 70,000 lives. We have enough scientific knowledge to bring this "white plague" under control if not to eradicate it.

"To do this requires the education of many millions of people to do their part in ridding the country of tuberculosis. Such a program calls for money and this is one of the chief uses to which the income from the Christmas seal sale is used."

Jackson county from tuberculosis is surprising low. The nation's death rate is 50 persons per 100,000, while in the county the rate is only 15 persons per 100,000. There are 22 persons from Jackson county in the Oregon State Tuberculosis sanitarium.

Better Use of Land Is '37 AAA Program

The 1937 agricultural adjustment program will place added emphasis on permanent rather than temporary soil conserving uses of the land and will pay at higher rates for such types of soil uses as establishment of perennial grasses and legumes.

This much advance information on the nature of the new program was given by Dr. E. J. Bell, assistant to the director of the western region of the AAA, in an address at the Eastern Oregon Wheat league annual convention in Heppner last week. Dr. Bell came to the meeting directly from Washington where conferences on details of the new program have been in progress for several weeks.

"The program under the soil conservation and domestic allotment act has as its objectives more than merely control of soil washing and soil blowing," said Dr. Bell. "The program embodies the economic use of the land, sound farming practice, and restoration of the income of farmers."

Dr. Bell added that estimates indicate that about 30 million more acres than desirable are being devoted to soil depleting and export crops. It is the purpose of the program to help the market situation and the future welfare of the country from a land resources standpoint by encouraging the increasing of soil conserving crops to this extent.

"In accordance with these objectives the 1937 program is being designed to make a permanent rather than a temporary adjustment in the use of the land. . . . The general principles of long-time adjustment from soil depleting crops to permanent conserving uses of the land has been adopted as a national policy.

"The rate of payment for establishing permanent stands of perennials this year will be somewhat higher than it was a year ago, and considerably higher than the payment for such practices as trashy fallow, plowing under green manure or other more short-time uses of the land."
