Those present included Bob Dunn, Betty Dunn, Melvin Poyer, Marvin Poyer, Marna Byrd, Yvonne Christlieb, Charleen Byrd, Eula Weanus, Patricia Bell, Norma Weanus and two leaders, Richard Joy and Mrs. Edwin Dunn.

● Mr. and Mrs. C. B. Lamkin entertained Mr. and Mrs. W. W. Caldwell of Pasadena one day last week.

● Miss Fern Weanus accompanied Mr. and Mrs. George King and daughter Beryl to Crater Lake Saturday night, returning Sunday.

● Mrs. Ethel Parks left Saturday for her home in San Francisco, after spending the past two months at the Herman Helm home. Mrs. Parks has been taking treatments at Helman Baths. She is an aunt of Helm.

● Mr. and Mrs. George Eldman of Yreka have moved into the Leo Schoeniger place. Eldman is employed at the Bellview Tile factory.

● Mrs. Fred Homes and Mrs. Johnnie Gruelle made a business trip to Medford Wednesday.

● Johnny Gruelle and son Dick were fishing on Rogue river Wednesday.

THAT YOUTHFUL AIR

The swish of taffeta and the flare of sunburst pleating lend an air of extreme youth to this black after noon frock. A deep facing of dull gold taffeta at the bottom of the skirt is the only note of color. That flattering callot is of dull gold velvet.

AT LAST it has come, that exciting time in the fashion year when we can peek around the corner and see what is going to be worn next season.

Fall colors will pay a glowing tribute to autumn leaves in cherry, cherry-rust, raspberry, gold, brown, spruce green and strange goldy-green. Then there is that new shade of blue called Sandringham, an exciting off-shade that is easy to wear. Black will be good, its new treatment being trimmings in natural, pink, shell and other pale but clear colors that will have a neon-like effect. And navy—that good old standby—will be as good as we always want it to be.

Last week we suggested that you get fashion ideas from the Shakespearean costumes worn in the festival. If you noticed the low cut square necklines trimmed with lace, the frilled edges of which turn toward the face, you will be interested to know that Harper's Bazaar backs this as sure-fire neck treatment. Along with the dirndl type of thing also is being advocated the waspish bodice coming down in a point at the front, the full gathers of the skirt swirling out below it, a la Elizabeth. Given a tiny ruff made of the same lace which outlines the neck, you have a recipe for enchantment.

Sport clothes are to be more simple and therefore smarter than ever. Slim bodice lines are indicated in most pre-season style releases. To help this along the idea of zipped slips is timely. A slip that is a bit too full has the tendency to make the dress worn over it seem a little mussed, or not perfectly fitted. By putting in a zipper placquet the fit may be perfect—try it.

Short sleeves will be another fall dress treatment. This is especially good with black if your arms are soft and white. The contrast is feminine and youthful. Other colors will do just as well though. However, no matter how small or short that sleeve may be, let it have distinctive qualities, a new cut, a new use of trimming material, or what you will to keep it from being just another sleeve.

Skirts are expected to go no higher than 13 and 14 inches.

Hats are to be crazier than ever with fuzzy feathers, odd angles and poodles of felt, snap brims, and roll brims, and no brims, and in all the colors in the book. Fortunately milliners seem to have the philosophy of anything goes, for if you have patience and opportunity it will be only a matter of time until you find the hat that exactly suits you. Here's a tip, though. Don't buy your fall hat too early. Give yourself plenty of time to get just the right thing, because nothing improves or ruins an outfit so quickly as that few square inches of felt that you perch on your head.

The etiquette question for the day deals with the use of "pardon me" and "excuse me." "Excuse me" means "please allow me to leave." "Pardon me" means "I regret having to inconvenience you" or "I am sorry for this breach of etiquette."

● Mr. and Mrs. D. Perozzi returned Sunday morning from a long trip to the middlewest and Rochester, Minn., where they visited their daughter, Dr. Thelma Perozzi. They were accompanied home by their other daughter, Miss Lucille Perozzi of Portland, who visited with them last week-end.
