GAINS NOTED IN DRIVE TO MAKE HIGHWAYS SAFE

A REMARKABLE decrease in highway deaths during the last quarter of 1937 was the highlight of traffic safety news for the year, Secretary of State Earl Snell declared today in reviewing the highway picture for the last 12 months.

Other outstanding trends during the year were:
A last-quarter slump in traffic injuries paralleling the decrease in deaths.

A sustained increase in highway travel over 1936.

Continued improvement of the accident-reporting system.

Secretary Snell reported greatly expanded efforts by his office in the field of traffic safety, following authorization of the work by the last legislature. Safety councils have been organized or are being organized in a number of Oregon communities, with the help of representatives from the secretary of state's office.

Safe driving schools have been held in Bend, Corvallis, Albany, Dallas, McMinnville, Newberg, Oregon City, West Linn, Medford, Grants Pass, Independence, Redmond and Prineville. The schools will be extended to other communities upon the completion of present courses in January or February.

Safety movies have been shown in 71 Oregon high schools, and will be kept in circulation until they have been viewed by every high school student body in the state.

Continuation of the present program and development of new channels of safety education are planned for 1938. Snell is hopeful that with a comprehensive safety campaign carried on through the entire year Oregon will take its place as the "safest state in the union."

Says—
I've come to put more electric outlets in your home

Are you stumbling over cords, having a hard time to make the vacuum cleaner reach into all the corners, waiting to use the toaster until the coffee is perked? It's nonsense, when it's so easy and so inexpensive to put in more outlets.
