June is the month of brides, and June brides are famous the country over. But nobody ever thinks of the June groom, who stays dutifully in the background until he's called to the altar. What do our June grooms think about as the fatal hour approaches? Do they actually chew their fingernails and consider the advisability of running away? Most of them probably do. Jack Haley of the movies gives his opinion in the following pictures.

"Gosh, tomorrow I take the big step. Gee, everybody's been giving me advice. Can you imagine! Some guys have the nerve to tell me that putting this ring on Mabel's finger means putting a ring around my neck! You know, a ball and chain! They're jealous, that's all!"

"Saay, maybe there's something to that! No more staying out all night... no more poker sessions with the gang... no more... no more... no... NO!!!"

"I CAN'T DO IT! I CAN'T DO IT! I TELL YOU!! I'LL RUN AWAY TO CHINA OR SUM'IN!! WHERE'S THAT TIMETABLE?!"

"Heck! Am I a man or a mouse! I'll show 'em who wears the pants in this family... boy oh boy... I'll write my own set of rules. No. 1. Who's the head of this family? Answer: Me!... No. 2. And who pays the bills? Answer: Me!... and so far into the night."
