ANDSIGHT IN SPORTS

BY I TOLD YOU SO

APS the best tournament to be held in Ashland by Southern Oregon College of Oregon (might's well get used new moniker) in 12 years worship was concluded Saturday when Coos River and Falls collided, the championship to Ken Schilling's Logos will represent B league of district 14 at Salem next week.

a popular Ashland boy, got on from his many friends who crowded the big gym to overflowing. His after hurdling St. Mary's, needed to be the favorite Coos River to win the championship, but they may never realize they were that the men were off their game Saturday night.

not that Butte Falls wasn't better team, but the final score was far from being a tie of the competition met final contest. After having better than a Model T climber street without benefit of water against Keno night before, the Coos River couldn't hit their mouths a fork Saturday evening, after time the ball rolled the Coos River hoop only grigan off and, in the meantime Butte Falls lads hit a streak that left fans (to say nothing of Coach ng).

is to be hoped that the e Falls Loggers will give od account of themselves district 14 at the state nement. Unless this de- nment is another I. Pickem, will.

ost shading the tournament nterest Friday evening was set triumph when the Ash- igh Grizzlies closed their with a 29-27 defeat of the ng Medford Tigers. Coach O'Connell had the last grin Coach Russ Acheson, and this n took full advantage of the on when Billy Hulen of the rd Mail Tribune strode into nior high gym during the quarter. was about time.

Medford alibi—and of alibi were ready and trim- with bells—was "If Kresse n in the game—" and "we bbed out of two points." Pear City fan was heard to remark, "These Ashland people sure get a kick out of finally winning a game!" Which was the truth, except that it wasn't "finally." Eh, Grizzlies of 1939-40?

Our hat is off to a fine bunch of ball players and a good job of coaching on the part of Skeet O'Connell. That his knowledge of the game went a long way toward keeping a shorthanded crew in the running and finally cop second place in the district was demonstrated repeatedly by the effective floor work of the lads.

Especially later in the season, plays worked with effectiveness against all competition, games being lost mostly because at least three members of the Grizzly quintet had nights when they couldn't have dropped a beanbag through an open manhole. The coach can teach the boys how to gain possession of the ball and set it up for open shots, but from there on the points are up to the players.

Next year Ashland high school should have a more successful outfit (although this season they won eight of their 16 games) with Weaver, Ardis Warren and Smith having received valuable experience, and a bunch of outstanding players coming up from Coach Earl Rogers' Junior ranks.

Kenny Harris, acknowledged the most outstanding player of all southern Oregon, will graduate in the spring, while his teammate and very useful ally, Bud Silver, will be ineligible unless the nine-semer rule is changed.

Although the boys now laying away their red and white satins for the season lost half their games, they tried with all their might during all of them. None failed to fully observe training rules. More than which no fan or coach can ask.
