Miner Commended For Support of Fair

A resolution of appreciation to the Southern Oregon Miner and other newspapers of the Shasta-Cascade Wonderland region that have constructively supported the Shasta-Cascade Wonderland exposition commission in their promotional activities to develop and publicize the Shasta-Cascade Wonderland scenic region and construct and maintain a creditable building and exhibits at the world's fair on Treasure Island, was adopted at a joint meeting of members of boards of supervisors and county courts and association members in Klamath Falls Saturday.

The meeting was in connection with a session to provide adequate financing for the exposition exhibit, and ways and means of taking full advantage of the promotional possibilities it affords.

At the same time the meeting unanimously deplored and condemned, in the same resolution the action of those newspapers who have failed to evidence a commonwealth spirit by supporting the work of the two organizations and, in certain cases, have printed allegedly unjust criticisms and misleading stories without even attempting to obtain true facts from officers of the organization.

The meeting was attended by approximately 50 representatives of all nine counties of the Wonderland region. It was the consensus of opinion that the Shasta-Cascade exhibit has been splendidly conceived and constructed, properly managed and is a credit and a valuable asset to the region.

Members of the Ashland Active club Wednesday night will elect officers for two positions. C. M. Litwiler and Hollis Beasley were nominated at last Wednesday night's session for the vacant vice president's post, while Elliott McCracken and John Broady were nominated for a trusteeship.

Origin of Names Of County's Towns Is Interesting Review

By WPA Federal Writers' Project

That Persist was named by William W. Willitts, pioneer settler, because it required 18 years of persistent effort to secure a post-office for his immediate neighborhood; that Orcal is name made up by railway officials by taking the first part of the names of the States Oregon and California, and that Tolo, named for Yolo, Calif., received its name through a mistake of the postal authorities who read the "Y" as "T", are a few of the interesting origins of Jackson county place names found by the federal writers' project of the WPA in the research being conducted on the sources, origins, pronunciations and meaning of all Oregon place names.

This information is often obscure as much of it is pioneer lore which has not been written down. The federal writers' project wants to obtain, for a permanent record, all available data on present place names, or names by which places used to be known—for an example Tolo was first known as Willow Springs but an early resident, dialling the commonplace name, in 1886 petitioned the postal authorities to have it changed. Anyone having source information concerning geographic names—rivers, towns, lakes, mountains or any place worthy of a name—is asked to write the federal writers' project, Elks Building, Portland, Ore.

Oregon Pioneers With New Crime Laboratory

Oregon's new crime detection laboratory authorized by the recent legislature will make this state the first in the Union where state, county or city peace officers may obtain scientific aid without special charges, said Dr. Frank Menne, head of the pathology department at the Oregon Medical school, in an address to the faculty Triad club at Oregon State college.

Dr. Menne, who has built up a famous crime detection laboratory as a sideline to his regular work, will on July 1 turn over the direction of the expanded facilities to Dr. Joseph Beeman, who participated in the program here. Scientific apparatus which permits almost unbelievable identification of materials in crime detection work was explained. Dr. Menne believes the next major step in coping with crime in Oregon will be to replace the present antiquated coroner system with a modern organization headed by a state medical examiner.
