Ashland Student On Willamette Council

Herbert Davis, Willamette university student from Ashland and an alumnus of Ashland high school, was in attendance last week at a meeting of the student executive council. Several appointments were made to various student body offices and also several budget reports were approved.

Davis was elected by the senior class last year as its representative to the executive council.

Davis also has been active in many other extra-curricular activities during the last year.

Willamette university, with an enrollment exceeding 800, is the oldest university west of the Mississippi and is situated in the fertile Willamette valley at Salem. In 1942 the school will celebrate its 100th anniversary.

Willard Colbaugh of Springfield, Mo., visited here Sunday at the home of Mr. and Mrs. George Icenhower.
