complete health with each and every treatment. Neither they or Mrs. Jessel give up. We have never heard of any claim to complete cure being made after one or two treatments.

One paragraph of the offensive article is given over to a labored explanation of the claim that Mrs. Jessel's work is purely psychological, the working of mental processes and relief of inhibitions that have caused persons to think they were ill when actually they were not. Reduced to language as we understand it this means that we have just been imagining we were sick.

We will assure a courteous reception to the unknown writer of the Tidings story if he will come up and see the boys in the wheel chairs who will soon be walking for the first time in their lives, the men and women who are walking without crutches after having been bedridden for years, those recovered from malignant growths which medical science had been unable to touch, and invalids of years of suffering with heart trouble, those who are sleeping peacefully at night after a lifetime of agony with asthma, people with every ailment to which the human body is subject, all now on the way to complete recovery. If all these ills are imaginary, God help the people who are really sick.

Results Should Prove

How does this sound to you people who have been confined to your beds for years as the result of injuries? Again we quote from the article attacking Mrs. Jessel: "For instance, a man suffers a back injury and is bedfast for years. During this time the injury heals but the mind has not accepted the fact. By removing a mental barrier, Mrs. Jessel causes this man to walk again. Where actual disease exists, however, Ashland doctors assert that no 'laying on of hands' can have any effect."

So you see you were well all the time and didn't know it. What goes for you must go for all of us. We were all a bunch of huskies playing hooky from a football team or dodging the draft. But wait. Here's more from the editorial enlightener:

"Another explanation was that persons who had been treated by physicians for months, actually were well on the way to recovery before they came to Mrs. Jessel. They had not thought they were getting well, however, until Mrs. Jessel convinced them that they were well. Accordingly they credited her with cures that actually were the work of medical science, it was explained."

You see we all made an unnecessary trip to Ashland. All we had to do was to think we were getting well and we could have done this at home. The concluding paragraph of the unwholesome story again made an insinuating reference to the apron pocket which has put many hundreds of people in a fighting mood, not only Mrs. Jessel's patients but the citizens and business people of Ashland as well.

Why the "Attack?"

If the newspaper attack upon Mrs. Jessel is part of a plan to force her to leave Ashland its sponsors are doomed to disappointment. Mrs. Jessel states that she likes this community as a place of residence and intends with her family to remain here.

Many large centers of population would go to almost any lengths to secure her as a resident, there to carry on her wonderful work for suffering humanity, and Ashland is to be congratulated upon her decision to remain here despite the antagonism displayed by a small element within the city.

Why Mrs. Jessel is not given the hearty, unanimous support of every resident of Ashland and the surrounding territory is a mystery to the thousands of people who have come from hundreds to even thousands of miles to be restored to health by her God-given power.

All for Common Cause

We are informed that all the doctors in Ashland are not opposed to her work, as insinuated in the newspaper attack on her. We know doctors in other cities who have recommended that patients visit her and have also sent members of their own families to receive the benefits of her treatment after all that highly skilled medical science could do had proved unavailing. Mrs. Jessel has no quarrel with the medical profession and its members should have none with her. All are working in a common cause, the restoration to health of those afflicted by illness.

Mrs. Jessel makes no class distinction in relieving the suffering. All are on an equality and receive the same measure of relief under the same conditions, whatever their race or color, degree of power or servitude, religion or worldly possessions. She loves them all and they all love her, as they have every reason to. It is impossible to understand how any person can deliberately, through a newspaper or otherwise, question the motives of this gentle woman, whose good to humanity cannot be even estimated.

According to the introduction to the article under discussion it was first published in The Dalles Chronicle on Sept. 23. Conjecture has been aroused as to why it was Oct. 24, a month and a day later, before it found its way into the Ashland Daily Tidings. Did it require that lengthy deliberation before a decision could be reached as to whether or not it should be given to the people of Ashland? Or was there another reason why it was published at this particular time? Those familiar with the situation incline to the latter belief.

Ask Fair Play

It is not the desire of the partisans of Mrs. Jessel to engage in a newspaper controversy and this article is written only in the interest of fair play and to defend the name of the fine woman who has done such wonderful work in restoring to health the thousands who have called on her for help.

Robertson came to Oregon in 1904 and bought a stock ranch in Union County. In 1909 he purchased a farm in Polk County on the present site of West Salem and Kingwood Heights, where he now resides. Mr. Robertson has been a member of the Oregon Bar since 1905, at which time he graduated from the Law Department of the University of Michigan, after both a classical and a legal education. In 1913, Mr. Robertson became engaged in legal work abroad for American industry. He speaks six languages, having studied abroad, specializing in economics and political science. He served throughout the World War, the first year in Infantry (1917-18), and as Assistant Military Attache at Rome, Italy, 1918-19, being demobilized in June, 1919. He returned abroad at once to resume work as representative of American industries seeking foreign trade expansion. His work covered all of Europe, the Near East and all of Northern Africa. Mr. Robertson was chosen a member of the Army War College at Washington, D. C. for the 1931-32 session, and was then promoted to Lieut.-Colonel, M.I. reserve. He is a member of Kingwood Post No. 81, American Legion, and Marion Post No. 661, Veterans of Foreign Wars. Since 1933, Mr. Robertson has spent most of his time in Oregon, taking an active interest in public affairs, and writing on world problems, and has been much in demand as a lecturer on international relations. He urges complete national defense, and is definitely opposed to war, unless attacked. He is against provoking a foreign war or trying to shoot democracy into foreign nations. He opposes all war profiteering. He urges the broadest possible use of our natural heritage of hydro-electric power, free from utility racketeering and Holding-Company domination. He believes our farmers are better able to work out their own problems than professional politicians, and that the solution of our farm problems should be based upon the programs of our state and national farm organizations. He urges more effective Social Security legislation, and definite provision for adequate old age pensions, which he has strongly advocated since 1932. He believes our workers must be given a fair deal in this land of plenty, if democracy is to endure; that our economic, social, and political problems can be solved by democratic processes, in the American way, and that our greatest National Defense is to make democracy work as it should within our own borders. He believes the State of Oregon deserves much greater Federal appropriations for aerial and naval defense, in which we are greatly surpassed by California and Washington. 16 X CHARLES A. ROBERTSON For Congressman, First Oregon District. Paid adv. by Democratic State Central Committee, Charles H. Leach, Chairman; Flavel Temple, Secretary.'

We believe this purpose has been accomplished by the above communication and will rest our case for the present.

The writer is unknown to the people of this city with the exception of some of the patients of Mrs. Jessel, and the signature of his name would mean nothing. It has been given to the editor of the Southern Oregon Miner in conformity with the rules of all legitimate newspapers, where it may be obtained by anyone interested.

The real signers are the hundreds of men, women and children who are being restored to health by Mrs. Jessel and who have expressed the sentiments put into writing at their request.

The Southern Oregon Miner is cordially thanked for its courtesy in publishing the communication and every good wish for its continued success is expressed.

AHS ELEVEN TO PLAY IN YREKA

The Ashland high school Grizzlies, weakened by injuries, leave this afternoon for their gridiron tilt with Yreka on the Miners' turf at 8 o'clock tonight.

With Bob Weaver out with a cracked rib, Westerberg suffering an injured leg, Newbury away on a trip, Provost plagued by boils, and Herrin having trouble with an eye and leg, the Leighton Blake camp will take to the field tonight with a revised lineup to face an in-out team which stopped the Weed Cougars 7 to 6 this season.

Blake has been working his squad hard but reports drift in from the Grizzly field that blocking and tackling are not up to par and the Grizzly offense which has gained much favorable comment looks off in practice.

Since 1935, when the score favored Ashland 25 to 0, the two teams have met four times with Yreka taking only one win. Records show Ashland winning in 1937 13 to 0 but losing in 1938 12 to 7. In 1939 the two teams tied 6 to 6.
