HINDSIGHT ON SPORTS

By I TOLD YOU SO

Russell Hawk and his super-colossal, unbeatable basketball team, made up of Ashland high scrubs not good enough to turn out for varsity competition, with the exception of Phil Lindsay, who was a star bench-warmer for Skeet O'Connell last season, got a game with Leighton Blake's Barbarians, youngsters turned down by Jerry Gastineau of the Grizzly varsity, one night last week.

The hawkers made many boasts around town as to what they would do to Blake's team and even had the score all figured out—many points in their favor, of course. But when the smoke of battle cleared away, it was Leighton Blake and his boys who were going around the gym with their heads in the air and their chests out, for the Barbs were on the big end of a 24 to 22 score. Nothing has been heard of the Hawk-ers as to their basketball ability since.

The 52 to 23 beating the Ashland Grizzlies took at Klamath Falls Friday night came as a complete surprise to their many valley followers. The loss and poor showing made by the Grizzlies can be placed against no particular player but was just one of those nights when the Grizzlies didn't click and the Pelicans were "hot."

When leaving the floor after the game, George Erickson, who has refereed many Grizzly games this season, was heard to remark, "They didn't look like the same team at all!"

The massacre was the worst defeat a Gastineau-coached team has ever taken. The kids did the best they could but their best efforts to both score and work the ball down the floor turned to naught as the Pelicans swarmed all over them. It was just a bad night and thank goodness our Grizzlies got it out of their systems when the tilt didn't count in conference standings.

Physical condition—or rather lack of it, showed up at the second SOCE-Humboldt game here Friday night. The sad part of it was that it was our Sons whose tongues were hanging out in the final 10 minutes when a hard drive might have made a different score. Humboldt made a clean sweep of the series.

Mrs. Charles M. Giffen, who has continued to edit the Piute County News in Utah since the change in the Miner personnel, arrived Tuesday in Ashland. Mrs. Giffen will be an active member with her husband and brother in the Miner office.

Oregon Farmers Study Lighting

As more and more Oregon rural home become connected with electric service, interest is increasing in farm home lighting, reports Miss Lois Lutz, home management specialist of the Oregon State college extension service.

Oregon has consistently had a high percentage of rural homes served with electricity, and many of those wired years ago could modernize their existing lighting systems without much expense, to provide better light with less glare, says Miss Lutz. Recent figures show that about 42,000 of the 65,000 farms in the state have electric service. Of this number, approximately 4700 have been added by the eight REA financed systems.

To answer the increasing requests for information on rural home lighting the extension service issued bulletin No. 531 some time ago, entitled "Better Farm and Home Lighting." About the same time the United States department of agriculture published Farmers Bulletin 1838-F, "Electric Light for the Farmstead." Either of these may be had free by Oregon citizens.

Light specialists now recommend much more light and better distributed light in homes than they did formerly. It is well for the eyes, they say, if all light in a room is well diffused with a minimum of glare and with no sharp contrast between lighted objects and their backgrounds.

Ceiling fixtures in which bare bulbs are used may be converted into fixtures giving diffused light by covering the bulbs with individual shades or by using diffusing odds of making these changes at moderate cost are discussed in the bulletin.

Improvements of electric service in houses wired years ago sometimes involve putting in more convenient outlets and switches. Double or treble outlets in the living room increase the number of table and floor lamps the family can use, and such outlets in bedrooms are equally convenient for bedside lights and lamps attached to the head of the bed.

RECRUITS SOUGHT FOR MARINE CORPS RESERVE

Young men are being sought by the US Marine Corps recruiting service for enlistment in the volunteer Marine Corps reserve. Men enlisted in the reserve will be assigned to active duty upon enlistment and transferred to recruit depots for training the same as received by those who enlist in the regulars.

If the Marine Corps is enlarged, permitting a larger number of vacancies, they may be discharged from the reserve for the purpose of enlisting in the regular Marine Corps, if they desire.

The same standards and qualifications that govern the enlisting of men for the regular service will apply in all respects to the reservists enlisted. The term of enlistment, training, duty and opportunities for promotion will be the same as for men enlisted in the regular service. Although they are to be put on active duty immediately, a full four years of active duty cannot be guaranteed, as they would possibly be placed in an inactive status if the Marine Corps reserve should be demobilized prior to expiration of enlistment due to the termination of the emergency.
